Peace at Last.

Let Us Hope So.

Why Is Wall Street Crazy?

The Prince Comes Home.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

An event, more important historically than the great war, is the agreement of Europe's leading nations to arbitrate instead of fighting. France and Germany, most important in the agreement, because most apt to fight, show an earnest desire to keep the peace and start building from now on.

President Coolidge attaches great importance to the Locarno treaties, believing they will have a permanently peaceful effect.

If the white races have decided to stop murdering each other, it is certainly good news.

The suggestion from Washington is that we should now call an international parley here to discuss limitation of armaments, regulating size of armies, etc.

Why not let Europe continue to work out her own salvation? Because we kept out of the league of nations, Coolidge making it clear that we would not finance new wars, Europe begins to act sensibly. Why must we mix in?

As to the size of armies, big business in this country wants an army of certain size, not for war but for strikes or other industrial troubles. Big business finding itself face to face with a well organized labor army is determined to have at command a national army big enough for safety and would not accept less.

This country [illegible] keeping peace on this continent. Wars between South American republics have practically ceased, arbitration by Uncle Sam being accepted in important cases. Why not try to be useful here, on our western half of the world, and let who will be clever in Europe?

An eloquent Negro preacher at the Stockholm church conference spoke of the five great races of men as "the five fingers on the hand of God."

If we can attend to our mixed race here and be useful and decent from Patagonia to the Arctic circle we may well allow Providence to look after the four other "fingers."

High finance wants to know what is going on back of the stock exchange frenzy that led to a sale of 2,684,907 shares of stock in one day. Two stocks alone, General Motors and U. S. Steel, sold more than 350,000 shares.

Such runaway stock markets worry the "best minds" for if a smash comes they must pick up the pieces. They like to move conservatively, making money every day with the reins in their hands. When the public seizes the reins and the runaway starts, high finance worries. It has put up the price of gambling funds called "call

The two men were returning from Steubenville. Firm driving the motorcycle and Custer occupying the side car, when the accident occurred. The driver is said to have lost the road in the heavy fog and collided with a telephone pole.

Firm's legs were severed by the impact.

The two men were removed to the Gill hospital, Steubenville, where Firm died at 10 o'clock Sunday morning. Custer, who sustained a concussion of the brain and internal injuries, will recover.

FIVE-MONTH SCHOOL TERM LOOMS IF ELECTORS R[illegible]

Warning is Given by Supt. McVay in Appeal For Additional Revenue to Maintain Efficiency.

Failure of the voters to approve the three-mill school levy at the election on Tuesday, November 3, will mean that "our schools cannot remain in session for more than five months this year."

This is the warning sounded by Superintendent of Schools Charles C. McVay today in appealing to the voters to support the levy when they go to the polls.

The school head points out that the proposal will not increase school taxes, but means merely a renewal of the levy which has been in effect for the last five years and which expires this year. Not only will the school term be shortened but the rating of the high school will be lowered so that graduates will be compelled to undergo an

Costs Ollie Harvey $50 to Talk Back To Mayor Brown

It cost Ollie Harvey, colored, $50 to talk back to Mayor Brown today when he was arraigned upon a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

Harvey was arrested in his home in Second street by Captain Conley, Patrolman Haley and Turnkey Cline at 2:30 o'clock this morning while "entertaining" a party of friends, according to the police.

"I'll fine you $100 and costs," said the mayor.

Then Harvey became abusive.

"That'll cost you $50 more and if you don't shut up I'll raise the ante on you again," replied the mayor. The prisoner said no more. His fine was paid by a woman friend.

Police say that Harvey threatened to "get" Captain Conley after the raid.

Gale Damages Paddle Wheel of Steamship Commonwealth.

TOWED TO PORT

Caught in Storm That Swept New England.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 26.—The steamship Commonwealth, Fall River to New York, carrying 325 passengers and 75 officers and crew, reported by wireless today that she was helpless in the gale off Watch Hill.

The coast guard cutter Acushnet and the New London wrecking tug Commissioner put out to the Commonwealth's assistance.

Latest reports by radio stated that the Acushnet and the Commissioner had the Commonwealth in tow for Newport—that all on board were safe.

Captain Calls For Aid

The gale, which damaged the Commonwealth's port paddle wheel and buckets, was the same that swept New England with hurricane force, wrecking buildings, killing one man and injuring six others in Woburn, Mass.

The Commonwealth, which sailed from Fall River and Newport last evening, had weathered the gale until miday between the arm of Point Judith and the Watch Hill shore. At this point the shell was so rocked by the hurricane wind that her port paddle wheel and buckets were torn away, rendering her helpless. Anchors were dropped and calls were money," but that did NOT check the runaway.

One or two trips across the continent with frequent stops would make the boom seem less mysterious to those amazed by it. The nation is loaded down with wealth and the whole world keeps on shipping in more.

There are at least ten thousand separate local booms in addition to the general national boom.

The surprising thing is that the whole boom movement has been so steady and moderate. Suppose there were to start a genuine real estate boom, for instance, in Chicago or New York. If Miami, with 80,000 population, can sell city land at $25,000 a front foot, what would be the boom price in New York, a city with a population that increases each year about three and a half times the total population of Miami?

Also Americans are earning twice what they earned before the war and they are spending or investing their earnings.

There is nothing in being a bear just now.

The prince of Wales returns home from a long journey as "imperial advance agent" in South and West Africa and South America. His "firm" sends him out in fine style on a battleship with no close questioning of expense accounts and the young traveling man is worth what he costs.

The Spectator, a Tory weekly, most respectful in its attitude toward royalty, wants to know why the prince does not now "attach himself to some public cause."

It's a foolish question. An heir apparent to the throne must not take sides in any important national question. He must be all things to all parties, not knowing whether a coal miner or a duke will be prime minister and write his first speech from the throne, when he becomes king.

Besides the British empire is a vast business and what every business needs in this day is a good advertising man and a good salesman.

The Prince of Wales is both.

The British dirigible R-33 rose 3,000 feet in the air, carrying suspended below it a monoplane attached to a "trapeze." The monoplane was released, flew around in the air for half an hour, long enough to go to a nearby city, drop bombs and return. Then it hooked on to the dirigible again, traveled with that for a while and was released once more.

In England they know how to manage dirigibles and heavier than air machines. Perhaps their national flying force is managed by men that understand flying. That would help, it might be tried here.

The richest country in the world ought to pay federal judges decent salaries instead of the present miserable pay.

It is suggested that the minimum salary be $10,000 a year, but that is inadequate. If a judge was worth $7,500 a year some years ago he is certainly worth $15,000 a year now. The people do not protect themselves when they cheat their judges through inadequate pay.

The women engaged in a heated argument just prior to the shooting.

PEACEFUL EUROPEAN HORIZON FADES; DIPLOMATIC SKIES DULL

One week ago Europe hailed prospects of permanent peace as the drafters of the Locarno security pacts returned to their home capitals. Today Europe has war clouds in the Balkans and the prospects of the Locarno pacts being at least delayed in ratification if not entirely rejected.

Political events have moved rapidly.

Nationalist cabinet ministers have handed in their resignations to President Hindenburg of Germany. This maneuver may force an election, putting ratification of the Locarno pact up to the German people.

Finance Minister Caillaux, whose financial proposals are unsatisfactory to the French chamber majority, refuses to resign and threatens to cause the downfall of the Painleve cabinet, possibly complicating French ratification of the Locarno pacts.

Greece and Bulgaria are summoned before the league of nations council today on charges of violating the league of nations covenant. Unless the league can assert its authority over these two nations and restore peace, the prestige of the league will be greatly injured and Germany's entrance into the league may be prohibited by public opinion.

Russia has flatly rejected a suggestion by Premier Baldwin that the soviets might now desire to enter the league.

The peaceful European horizon of a week ago has faded, and diplomatic skies are dull and gloomy.

FIVE KILLED IN NEW YORK

Thirty Aboard Coal Barges Rescued by Cutters.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Heavy property damage and the loss of at least five lives in and around New York City was caused by the terrific gale that swept the Atlantic seaboard yesterday, according to reports received today.

Thirty men, women and children aboard 20 coal barges being towed from Raritan bay to New York were rescued by Coast Guard cutters and police boats as they were being blown to sea. The gale had torn them loose from the tugs towing them.

An expectant mother and her unborn child, two fishermen, another man and a six-year-old girl perished in this vicinity. Mrs. Lucille Day was killed when the wind whipped a clothes line she was hanging out of her hand as she leaned from a fifth story window. She fell to the courtyard below, Doctors operated in an attempt to save her child but it died also.

Frank Doebell nad William C. Hambler, of Brooklyn, Fishermen, drowned when the storm overturned their boat. Three others with them were rescued.

Six-year-old Della Porter of Little Falls, N. J., was killed when the wind blew down the walls of an old laundry near where she was playing.

John Namm of this city was asphyxiated when wind blew out a burning gas jet in the room in which he was sleeping.

sent for aid by Captain R. J. Roberts.

Captain Roberts had found it impossible to make repairs at sea and he could not continue.

At first fear for the safety of the passengers was expressed and plans were made to transfer them to rescue ships. But the wind subsided somewhat and the transfer was found unnecessary.

Put Passengers Ashore.

At Newport passengers will be put ashore and those who desire may continue to New York by special train.

Officers of the Commonwealth said by radio they were uncertain whether the contact with the heavy roll of the sea or contact with some floating wreckage caused the loss of the port paddle wheel and buckets.

Messages telling of the plight of the Commonwealth were picked up by the Independent Radio company at New London, Conn., and relayed to Warren T. Berry, superintendent of the line operating the Commonwealth.

The first message from Captain Roberts said: "Broke bucket and port paddle wheel. Obliged to anchor."

The next message said:

"Damage too extensive for repairs where we are; will have to be towed to Newport."

Coast Guard Goes to Rescue.

A telephone message was put through to the coast guard station at Woods Hole and almost in less time than it takes to write it the coast guardsmen aboard the Acushnet were tumbling out of their bunks and the cutter was leaving her wharf for the run south.

The run of the Acushnet from the coast to the stricen liner was a memorable one for those aboard. The wind was tearing down the coast line at a 60-mile clip. The little Acushnet put her nose into the swell and like a greyhound of the sea reached her objective.

Meanwhile, the Merritt-Chapman Scott coporation's tug Commissioner put out from New London but her run was a shorter one than the Acushnet.

Both the Acushnet and the Commissioner carried orders to "stand by to take of passengers and offer tow if needed."

"Graveyard of Coast."

However, when the two vessels reached the side of the rolling Commonwealth they found that the liner was weathering the storm and that a tow was what was needed.

Ropes and tow lines were placed between the Acushnet, Commissioner and the Commonwealth and the trip back to Newport was soon under way.

The spot where the Commonwealth was disabled is known among mariners as "the graveyard of the Rhode Island coast." It was here that the steamship Larchmont—a Providence to New York liner—went down with a loss of 130 souls. Other smaller ships have met a similar fate in the runway between the Rhode Island shore and Block Island. It was off Block Island that the submarine S-51 was rammed and sunk with a loss of 33 lives.

Man Shot During Card Game.

Alabama Hit

The damage done was largely to small communities and outlying farms.

The heaviest loss of life was in the territory surrounding Troy, in Pike county, where the twister first descended. After blowing in from Crenshaw county. From the Troy vicinity, it ranged eastward into Barbour and northward into Bullock county, where it spent its force.

The dead included four members of the family of Walter Knight, near Troy, whose house was demolished by the wind. Four of the Knight children were reported instantly killed, and two others injured. Knight and his wife were reported probably fatally injured.

The storm left a trail of wreckage in its wake. Houses, fences and outbuildings were blown to splinters, trees uprooted and a terrific downpour of rain followed immediately behind the wind. This and a severe electrical storm hampered rescue operations and prevented an accurate check of the death toll for hours.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Financial assistance for the sufferers in Alabama's tornado zone was offered today by the American Red Cross.

George Grane, the Mobile representative of the Red Cross, was instructed to proceed to the devastated area, take charge of relief work and render necessary assistance.

you may form another cabinet without me.

"I refuse.

"I will go before the chamber with the entire cabine and fall with it and not alone."

Entire Cabinet May Fall.

After this dramatic stand by Caillaux the cabinet adjourned until tomorrow, in an effort to patch up the situation. Public opinion seems to agree with Caillaux's prediction that the entire cabinet and fall with it and goes before the chamber.

An official communique strives to make it appear that all is well. It states that Caillaux read his financial project to the cabinet, but had only one copy and therefore it was impossible for a general discussion. The official statement says that cabinet members will be furnished with copies of Caillaux's projects this afternoon and will have an opportunity to study them before tomorrow's meeting.

Luther Cabinet Will Not Quit.

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—The Luther cabinet will not resign, as the result of the resignation of three Nationalist members.

The cabinet, described as a "rump cabinet," will continue in office, filling the three vacent porfolios with the respective secretaries to the departing ministers.

Nationalist ministers handed their resignations to President Hindenburg.

Dr. Schiele, minister of the interior; Herr Von Schlieben, minister of finance, and Herr Neuhaus, minister of commerce, are out. The Nationalist opposition to the Locarno agreements proved more than a gesture made as a play to the Nationalist galleries.

President Von Hindenburg, the old war-horse of the Nationalists, thus finds himself deserted by leaders of the party which swept him into the presidency.

ATHENS, Oct. 26.—Greece and Bulgaria have agreed to withdraw their troops from each other's territory, it was announced tonight.

The agreement for the return of the troops to the confines of their own frontiers was reached after Rumania had made representations.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Reports of renewed fighting on the Greco-Bulgarian frontier reached London today at the same time that Foreign Secretary Chamberlain prepared to set out for Paris, where the council of the league of nations will attempt to settle the trouble.

The Greek legation today issued another denial that Greek attacks upon the Bulgars had been renewed. The legation stated that orders have been given to the troops to withdraw to their original positions as soon as Greek soil is clear of Bulgarians. It was also denied by the legation that Bulgarian porsoners had been executed, the few prisoners taken having been sent to Salonika, it was said.

Slays Aged Farmer, Shoots Two Women And Kills Self

STURBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 26.—The murder of a 63-year-old farmer, the shooting of the farmer's housekeeper and her daughter, and an all-night vigil at the side of the dead and wounded was revealed today when John Brown, 47, driver of the town's school bus, took his own life.

Brown had shot and instantly killed Eugene Holden, 63, had put three bullets into the body of Mrs. Mary Tiffany, 43, Holden's housekeeper, had shot Miss Jessie Tiffany three times in the hand, had missed killing her when a hairpin deflected a bullet intended for her head and had stood guard in the Holden home all night.

STORM WRECKS 17 AIRPLANES

Machines Torn From Moorings Along Chesapeake Beach.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Salvage operations were got under way today to save as much as possible out of the wreckage of seventeen of the navy's newest seaplanes, strung out along several miles of beach near Sollers' Point on the Chesapeake.

A 60-mile gale tore the planes loose from their moorings Sunday and tossed them on the beach, twisted, torn and broken.

At least six of the planes were totally wrecked, and of the other eleven naval officials today were hopeful that the motors and less fragile portions could be recovered.

Meanwhile, an inquiry was ordered from the navy department to ascertain if there had been negligence or "bungling" in this latest peace-time catastrophe to the navy, which wiped out nearly the entire sea-plane contingent of the Atlantic coast.

The wrecked planes were part of the Flotilla of 23 that were sent to Baltimore for maneuvers in connection with the Schneider cup races. They comprised two complete squadrons, under command of Commander T. G. Ellyson.

Of the half dozen ships unhurt, several were saved by their pilots leaping into the cockpits and steering them off-shore to ride out the gale.

The blow was a severe one to the naval air service, as the wrecked planes constituted the newest and best ships in the service. They were torpedo and scouting planes of late construction, and only a half dozen survive in the entire service aside from those sent to Baltimore.

They cost $25,000 each without motors, which will make the monetary oss in the disaster run to considerable figure.

Navy officials were gloomy today over this latest peace-time disaster—coming at a time when the navy already is under fire for numerous mishaps, and defending itself against charges of "bungling amateurism" and "inefficiency" made by Col. William Mitchell.

Five-month Term

examination before entering colleges, it is declared.

In order to create interest in the proposed levy, school children in the district have been asked to write an essay, dealing with the proposal. Pupils, also have been asked to give six reasons why the levy should be adopted.

Fifteen thousand sample ballots have been printed. Each school child is to be given two of these ballots to be taken to his home. Arrangements also have been made to have the ballots distributed in homes which have no children in school.

Here is Superintendent McVay's appeal to the voters:

"Five years ago, the people of East Liverpool were called upon to vote a three-mill levy for a period of five years in order that our schools might continue in session for nine months each year.

"This levy was passed at that time and the schools of East Liverpool were placed on the same basis as other schools throughout the state, indicating that the voters of East Liverpool were interested in their boys and girls.

"Now, this same question comes up again this year in renewing this levy for another period of five years. This levy is not only asked for in East Liverpool schools but it will be voted upon in 16 other districts in Columbiana county.

This levy will not increase your taxes, as it is only asking for the renewal for another period of five years. This levy alone will bring in for school purpose more than one-third of all the revenue for school purposes.

"If this levy fails to pass, our schools cannot remain in session for more than five months this school year, and our children will not be given an equal opportunity with other children throughout the state. Our high school would lose its standing and graduates would not be admitted to any college without examination.

"Its defeat will mean that East Liverpool is willing to occupy an inferior place in school ranking; it will mean we have failed to retain our place among progressive cities of Ohio.

"Can we as citizens of East Liverpool fail not to renew this levy for another period of five years?"

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Industrial and motors stocks started the New week at a slightly higher range of values, but selling orders at this level were quite liberal in the early trad- highest for the period.

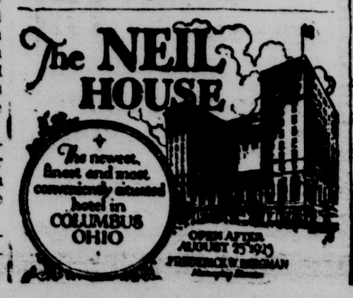
Albert Eick Loses Liquor Law Fight In Supreme Court

Va., lost in the supreme court of the United States today an appeal for review and reversal of his conviction for violating the prohibition law and his fine of $10,000 and penitentiary sentence of 18 months. Eick was convicted, with others, with having brought from Hermitage, Tenn., into West Virginia, 100 barrels of grain alcohol.



DRIVER FINED AFTER CRASH

W. W. Twitty, Akron, Assessed $50 in Police Court.

W. W. Twitty, Akron, paid two fines totaling $50, to Mayor Brown Sunday night, as the result of an automobile collision near the "Red steps" on Pennsylvania avenue.

Twitty, driving a Ford coupe, with two companions, is alleged to have been traveling west when he struck a Chevrolet coupe, driven by J. M. Scott, South Market street, who was headed toward East End. The front ends of both cars were badly damaged in the crash.

Captain Conley and Patrolman Roth arrested Twitty upon a charge of reckless driving. At the city hall it was discovered that his car was carrying license plates which had been issued for another car. He was assessed $25 and costs on the reckless driving charge and $20 and costs on the charge of using the wrong license plates. The fines were paid.

Both machines, which were disabled in the crash, were removed to the McElravy Brothers garage, Market street.

L. DeFalco, 1217 Anderson avenue, Wellsville, was cut about the face in a collision between his automobile and a River road bus, near the Thompson pottery, on the River road yesterday afternoon. One front wheel and fender on the machine was damaged.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 26.—At least nine Ohioans were dead today as the result of week-end tragedies, automobiles took a toll of four lives; trains, 2; fire, 2, and carbon monoxide gas, 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Puffer, of Springfield, O., were killed in a grade crossing accident at Washington C. H., when a B. & O. train hit their automobile.

Frank Firm, 23, of Toronto, was killed at Steubenville when his motorcycle hit a pole.

Mrs. E. H. Wait was killed by an automobile while crossing a street in Ravenna.

Margaret Ward, 16, was killed at Warren when, caught on a railroad trestle by a switch engine, she jumped into the Mahoning river.

Clell O'Brien, 44, was killed by a C. & O. train at Portsmouth, O.

money," but that did NOT check the runaway.

One or two trips across the continent with frequent stops would make the boom seem less mysterious to those amazed by it. The nation is loaded down with wealth and the whole world keeps on shipping in more.

There are at least ten thousand separate local booms in addition to the general national boom.

The surprising thing is that the whole boom movement has been so steady and moderate. Suppose there were to start a genuine real estate boom, for instance, in Chicago or New York. If Miami, with 80,000 population, can sell city land at $25,000 a front foot, what would be the boom price in New York, a city with a population that increases each year about three and a half times the total population of Miami?

Also Americans are earning twice what they earned before the war and they are spending or investing their earnings.

There is nothing in being a bear just now.

The prince of Wales returns home from a long journey as "imperial advance agent" in South and West Africa and South America. His "firm" sends him out in fine style on a battleship with no close questioning of expense accounts and the young traveling man is worth what he costs.

The Spectator, a Tory weekly, most respectful in its attitude toward royalty, wants to know why the prince does not now "attach himself to some public cause."

It's a foolish question. An heir apparent to the throne must not take sides in any important national question. He must be all things to all parties, not knowing whether a coal miner or a duke will be prime minister and write his first speech from the throne, when he becomes king.

Besides the British empire is a vast business and what every business needs in this day is a good advertising man and a good salesman.

The Prince of Wales is both.

The British dirigible R-33 rose 3,000 feet in the air, carrying suspended below it a monoplane attached to a "trapeze." The monoplane was released, flew around in the air for half an hour, long enough to go to a nearby city, drop bombs and return. Then it hooked on to the dirigible again, traveled with that for a while and was released once more.

In England they know how to manage dirigibles and heavier than air machines. Perhaps their national flying force is managed by men that understand flying. That would help, it might be tried here.

The richest country in the world ought to pay federal judges decent salaries instead of the present miserable pay.

It is suggested that the minimum salary be $10,000 a year, but that is inadequate. If a judge was worth $7,500 a year some years ago he is certainly worth $15,000 a year now. The people do not protect themselves when they cheat their judges through inadequate pay.

Woman is Slain In Fit of Jealousy By One of Her Sex

BOSTON, Oct. 26.—During a jealous rage, Mrs. Rosa Condia, 26, shot and killed Mrs. Rose. Trosi, 32, in a market in East Boston today. As Mrs. Trosi dropped dead, Mrs. Condi fled.

According to police, Salvatore Trosi, husband of the slain woman, had been paying attention to Mrs. Condia.

TOLEDO MOTORIST IS ASPHYXIATED

TOLEDO, Oct. 26.—Asphyxiated by dead today. He went to his garage carbon monoxide gas, Robert A. Harrisin, 58. Toledo business man was yesterday, shut the doors and started the motor. He was found dead sitting on the bumper an hour later.

PEACEFUL EUROPEAN HORIZON FADES; DIPLOMATIC SKIES DULL

One week ago Europe hailed prospects of permanent peace as the drafters of the Locarno security pacts returned to their home capitals. Today Europe has war clouds in the Balkans and the prospects of the Locarno pacts being at least delayed in ratification if not entirely rejected.

Political events have moved rapidly.

Nationalist cabinet ministers have handed in their resignations to President Hindenburg of Germany. This maneuver may force an election, putting ratification of the Locarno pact up to the German people.

Finance Minister Caillaux, whose financial proposals are unsatisfactory to the French chamber majority, refuses to resign and threatens to cause the downfall of the Painleve cabinet, possibly complicating French ratification of the Locarno pacts.

Greece and Bulgaria are summoned before the league of nations council today on charges of violating the league of nations covenant. Unless the league can assert its authority over these two nations and restore peace, the prestige of the league will be greatly injured and Germany's entrance into the league may be prohibited by public opinion.

Russia has flatly rejected a suggestion by Premier Baldwin that the soviets might now desire to enter the league.

The peaceful European horizon of a week ago has faded, and diplomatic skies are dull and gloomy.

FIVE KILLED IN NEW YORK

Thirty Aboard Coal Barges Rescued by Cutters.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Heavy property damage and the loss of at least five lives in and around New York City was caused by the terrific gale that swept the Atlantic seaboard yesterday, according to reports received today.

Thirty men, women and children aboard 20 coal barges being towed from Raritan bay to New York were rescued by Coast Guard cutters and police boats as they were being blown to sea. The gale had torn them loose from the tugs towing them.

An expectant mother and her unborn child, two fishermen, another man and a six-year-old girl perished in this vicinity. Mrs. Lucille Day was killed when the wind whipped a clothes line she was hanging out of her hand as she leaned from a fifth story window. She fell to the courtyard below. Doctors operated in an attempt to save her child but it died also.

Frank Doebell nad William C. Hambler, of Brooklyn, Fishermen, drowned when the storm overturned their boat. Three others with them were rescued.

Six-year-old Della Porter of Little Falls, N. J., was killed when the wind blew down the walls of an old laundry near where she was playing.

John Namm of this city was asphyxiated when wind blew out a burning gas jet in the room in which he was sleeping.

Tugs Answer

sent for aid by Captain R. J. Roberts.

Captain Roberts had found it impossible to make repairs at sea and he could not continue.

At first fear for the safety of the passengers was expressed and plans were made to transfer them to rescue ships. But the wind subsided somewhat and the transfer was found unnecessary.

Put Passengers Ashore.

At Newport passengers will be put ashore and those who desire may continue to New York by special train.

Officers of the Commonwealth said by radio they were uncertain whether the contact with the heavy roll of the sea or contact with some floating wreckage caused the loss of the port paddle wheel and buckets.

Messages telling of the plight of the Commonwealth were picked up by the Independent Radio company at New London, Conn., and relayed to Warren T. Berry, superintendent of the line operating the Commonwealth.

The first message from Captain Roberts said: "Broke bucket and port paddle wheel. Obliged to anchor."

The next message said:

"Damage too extensive for repairs where we are; will have to be towed to Newport."

Coast Guard Goes to Rescue.

A telephone message was put through to the coast guard station at Woods Hole and almost in less time than it takes to write it the coast guardsmen aboard the Acushnet were tumbling out of their bunks and the cutter was leaving her wharf for the run south.

The run of the Acushnet from the coast to the stricken liner was a memorable one for those aboard. The wind was tearing down the coast line at a 60-mile clip. The little Acushnet put her nose into the swell and like a greyhound of the sea reached her objective.

Meanwhile, the Merritt-Chapman Scott coporation's tug Commissioner put out from New London but her run was a shorter one than the Acushnet.

Both the Acushnet and the Commissioner carried orders to "stand by to take of passengers and offer tow if needed."

"Graveyard of Coast."

However, when the two vessels reached the side of the rolling Commonwealth they found that the liner was weathering the storm and that a tow was what was needed.

Ropes and tow lines were placed between the Acushnet, Commissioner and the Commonwealth and the trip back to Newport was soon under way.

The spot where the Commonwealth was disabled is known among mariners as "the graveyard of the Rhode Island coast." It was here that the steamship Larchmont—a Providence to New York liner—went down with a loss of 130 souls. Other smaller ships have met a similar fate in the runway between the Rhode Island shore and Block Island. It was off Block Island that the submarine S-51 was rammed and sunk with a loss of 33 lives.

Man Shot During Card Game.

Alabama Hit

The damage done was largely to small communities and outlying farms.

The heaviest loss of life was in the territory surrounding Troy, in Pike county, where the twister first descended. After blowing in from Crenshaw county. From the Troy vicinity, it ranged eastward into Barbour and northward into Bullock county, where it spent its force.

The dead included four members of the family of Walter Knight, near Troy, whose house was demolished by the wind. Four of the Knight children were reported instantly killed, and two others injured. Knight and his wife were reported probably fatally injured.

The storm left a trail of wreckage in its wake. Houses, fences and outbuildings were blown to splinters, trees uprooted and a terrific downpour of rain followed immediately behind the wind. This and a severe electrical storm hampered rescue operations and prevented an accurate check of the death toll for hours.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Financial assistance for the sufferers in Alabama's tornado zone was offered today by the American Red Cross.

George Grane, the Mobile representative of the Red Cross, was instructed to proceed to the devastated area, take charge of relief work and render necessary assistance.

you may form another cabinet without me.

"I refuse.

"I will go before the chamber with the entire cabine and fall with it and not alone."

Entire Cabinet May Fall.

After this dramatic stand by Caillaux the cabinet adjourned until tomorrow, in an effort to patch up the situation. Public opinion seems to agree with Caillaux's prediction that the entire cabinet and fall with it and goes before the chamber.

An official communique strives to make it appear that all is well. It states that Caillaux read his financial project to the cabinet, but had only one copy and therefore it was impossible for a general discussion. The official statement says that cabinet members will be furnished with copies of Caillaux's projects this afternoon and will have an opportunity to study them before tomorrow's meeting.

Luther Cabinet Will Not Quit.

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—The Luther cabinet will not resign, as the result of the resignation of three Nationalist members.

The cabinet, described as a "rump cabinet," will continue in office, filling the three vacent porfolios with the respective secretaries to the departing ministers.

Nationalist ministers handed their resignations to President Hindenburg.

Dr. Schiele, minister of the interior; Herr Von Schlieben, minister of finance, and Herr Neuhaus, minister of commerce, are out. The Nationalist opposition to the Locarno agreements proved more than a gesture made as a play to the Nationalist galleries.

President Von Hindenburg, the old war-horse of the Nationalists, thus finds himself deserted by leaders of the party which swept him into the presidency.

ATHENS, Oct. 26.—Greece and Bulgaria have agreed to withdraw their troops from each other's territory, it was announced tonight.

The agreement for the return of the troops to the confines of their own frontiers was reached after Rumania had made representations.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Reports of renewed fighting on the Greco-Bulgarian frontier reached London today at the same time that Foreign Secretary Chamberlain prepared to set out for Paris, where the council of the league of nations will attempt to settle the trouble.

The Greek legation today issued another denial that Greek attacks upon the Bulgars had been renewed. The legation stated that orders have been given to the troops to withdraw to their original positions as soon as Greek soil is clear of Bulgarians. It was also denied by the legation that Bulgarian porsoners had been executed, the few prisoners taken having been sent to Salonika, it was said.

Slays Aged Farmer, Shoots Two Women And Kills Self

STURBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 26.—The murder of a 63-year-old farmer, the shooting of the farmer's housekeeper and her daughter, and an all-night vigil at the side of the dead and wounded was revealed today when John Brown, 47, driver of the town's school bus, took his own life.

Brown had shot and instantly killed Eugene Holden, 63, had put three bullets into the body of Mrs. Mary Tiffany, 43, Holden's housekeeper, had shot Miss Jessie Tiffany three times in the hand, had missed killing her when a hairpin deflected a bullet intended for her head and had stood guard in the Holden home all night.

STORM WRECKS 17 AIRPLANES

Machines Torn From Moorings Along Chesapeake Beach.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Salvage operations were got under way today to save as much as possible out of the wreckage of seventeen of the navy's newest seaplanes, strung out along several miles of beach near Sollers' Point on the Chesapeake.

A 60-mile gale tore the planes loose from their moorings Sunday and tossed them on the beach, twisted, torn and broken.

At least six of the planes were totally wrecked, and of the other eleven naval officials today were hopeful that the motors and less fragile portions could be recovered.

Meanwhile, an inquiry was ordered from the navy department to ascertain if there had been negligence or "bungling" in this latest peace-time catastrophe to the navy, which wiped out nearly the entire sea-plane contingent of the Atlantic coast.

The wrecked planes were part of the Flotilla of 23 that were sent to Baltimore for maneuvers in connection with the Schneider cup races. They comprised two complete squadrons, under command of Commander T. G. Ellyson.

Of the half dozen ships unhurt, several were saved by their pilots leaping into the cockpits and steering them off-shore to ride out the gale.

The blow was a severe one to the naval air service, as the wrecked planes constituted the newest and best ships in the service. They were torpedo and scouting planes of late construction, and only a half dozen survive in the entire service aside from those sent to Baltimore.

They cost $25,000 each without motors, which will make the monetary oss in the disaster run to considerable figure.

Navy officials were gloomy today over this latest peace-time disaster—coming at a time when the navy already is under fire for numerous mishaps, and defending itself against charges of "bungling amateurism" and "inefficiency" made by Col. William Mitchell.

Five-month Term

examination before entering colleges, it is declared.

In order to create interest in the proposed levy, school children in the district have been asked to write an essay, dealing with the proposal. Pupils, also have been asked to give six reasons why the levy should be adopted.

Fifteen thousand sample ballots have been printed. Each school child is to be given two of these ballots to be taken to his home. Arrangements also have been made to have the ballots distributed in homes which have no children in school.

Here is Superintendent McVay's appeal to the voters:

"Five years ago, the people of East Liverpool were called upon to vote a three-mill levy for a period of five years in order that our schools might continue in session for nine months each year.

"This levy was passed at that time and the schools of East Liverpool were placed on the same basis as other schools throughout the state, indicating that the voters of East Liverpool were interested in their boys and girls.

"Now, this same question comes up again this year in renewing this levy for another period of five years. This levy is not only asked for in East Liverpool schools but it will be voted upon in 16 other districts in Columbiana county.

This levy will not increase your taxes, as it is only asking for the renewal for another period of five years. This levy alone will bring in for school purpose more than one-third of all the revenue for school purposes.

"If this levy fails to pass, our schools cannot remain in session for more than five months this school year, and our children will not be given an equal opportunity with other children throughout the state. Our high school would lose its standing and graduates would not be admitted to any college without examination.

"Its defeat will mean that East Liverpool is willing to occupy an inferior place in school ranking; it will mean we have failed to retain our place among progressive cities of Ohio.

"Can we as citizens of East Liverpool fail not to renew this levy for another period of five years?"

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Industrial and motors stocks started the New week at a slightly higher range of values, but selling orders at this level were quite liberal in the early trad- highest for the period.

The motors stocks forged to the ing today, and first prices in may of the active stocks proved to be the front in the early trading, with General Motors, Jordan and other active issues up a point or more. Stocks of the principal tobacco companies attracted considerable attention, with United Cigar Stores selling above 100 for the first time this year.

ally higher, but profit taking was in United States Steel sold fraction- order in the market's bell-wether, and it dropped back fractionally. Bethlehem Steel was exceptionally strong, selling at 49½, completing a gain of about 8 points since the middle of last week. British Empire Steel, Gulf States and Crucible continued to move forward, and reached the highest levels on the movement.

There was little or no change in speculative sentiment or in money conditions. Call money renewed at 4½, a slight increase over last week's closing figure. Larger production of views by the heads of the country's automobiles was promised in interimportant auto manufacturers, while the chairman of the Foundation company, arriving from Europe, declared that the Locarno pact will stabilize Europe as nothing else had done.

The buildings occupied by the Western Union Telegraph company and the Surber-Irondale Printing company were totally destroyed.

All available fire apparatus answered the alarm. Police reported that the conflagration started from a defective furnace in the printing establishment.

HUSBAND KILLS BOARDER, FLEES

AKRON, Oct. 26.—Police today are searching the "jungles," Akron rendezvous for criminals and hoboes, to locate Rufus Gray, alleged slayer of Nors Abray, shot to death when Gray returned unexpectedly from McKeesport, Pa., last night and found Abray with Mrs. Gray.

Abray was a boarder. Gray had been engaged in a building job at McKeesport and as soon as he entered his house he opened fire, police said.

Albert Eick Loses Liquor Law Fight In Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Albert Eick, Wheeling, W. Va., lost in the supreme court of the United States today an appeal for review and reversal of his conviction for violating the prohibition law and his fine of $10,000 and penitentiary sentence of 18 months. Eick was convicted, with others, with having brought from Hermitage, Tenn., into West Virginia, 100 barrels of grain alcohol.

DRIVER FINED AFTER CRASH

W. W. Twitty, Akron, Assessed $50 in Police Court.

W. W. Twitty, Akron, paid two fines totaling $50, to Mayor Brown Sunday night, as the result of an automobile collision near the "Red steps" on Pennsylvania avenue.

Twitty, driving a Ford coupe, with two companions, is alleged to have been traveling west when he struck a Chevrolet coupe, driven by J. M. Scott, South Market street, who was headed toward East End. The front ends of both cars were badly damaged in the crash.

Captain Conley and Patrolman Roth arrested Twitty upon a charge of reckless driving. At the city hall it was discovered that his car was carrying license plates which had been issued for another car. He was assessed $25 and costs on the reckless driving charge and $20 and costs on the charge of using the wrong license plates. The fines were paid.

Both machines, which were disabled in the crash, were removed to the McElravy Brothers garage, Market street.

L. DeFalco, 1217 Anderson avenue, Wellsville, was cut about the face in a collision between his automobile and a River road bus, near the Thompson pottery, on the River road yesterday afternoon. One front wheel and fender on the machine was damaged.

FIRE DESTROYS GARAGE, AUTO

Loss in Sunday Morning Blaze Estimated at $1,200.

A one-story shed and a Flint touring car were totally destroyed by a fire Sunday morning at 2 o'clock in the rear of the Frank Maitino property, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, in Main.

The damage is estimated at approximately $1,200.

The automobile, owned by Frank Fusci, was within the shed, the property of Maitino, and used as a garage.

The fire station received the alarm at 2 o'clock. Although firemen responded immediately, the flames were beyond control upon their arrival. Fire officials were unable to determine definitely the cause of the blaze.

HIGHS DEFEATED BY LEETONIA, 6-0

Another single touchdown margin gave the Orange and Black football team of Wellsville high its third successive setback of the season Saturday at Leetonia.

One touchdown represents the total scoring and gives the Leetonians another boost onward in the race for county laurels.

In their first game, Klinck's eleven lost to Dover, 12 to 6, the Doverites copping by a single touchdown. Last week, the locals were nosed out by Chester, the West Virginians scoring a touchdown while the Klinck eleven was registering on a safety. And again Saturday, one lone touchdown turned the trick.

The Orange and Black battled the central countians from start to finish, making the champions earn every inch of territory they covered in their march to conquest. But their inexperience counted too heavily against them. They were pitted against a veteran line and a heady quarterback who ran his backs well and the combination was too much for Klinck's light, green team.

The local outfit today turns its attention to the contest scheduled with Girard high next Saturday afternoon at Central Park. They are anticipating an engagement fully as strenuous as the Leetonia clash.

FLAMES THREATEN DRUG STORE HERE

The timely arrival of J. F. Calhoun, druggist, at his place of business, 335 Main street, at 7 o'clock this morning, prevented what might have resulted in a disastrous fire.

Flames, originating from alighted cigarette, smouldering all night long in an improvised cuspidor, a small sawdust filled box, broke out a few moments before Mr. Calhoun's arrival.

The cigarette had been tossed into the sawdust box Sunday night. It burned slowly through the sawdust, filling the drug store with smoke. Early this morning the fire caught the flooring and a small hole had been burned out, with the flames continuing to spread when Calhoun opened the store.

A bucket of water extinguished the fire with little damage.

Prominent Man tells.. how he was relieved of Kidney Trouble and Backache

New Lexington, Ohio — "I was troubled with my kidneys. The excretion was voided drop by drop, with severe pain and constant desire. I also had pain in my back under my short ribs and in my side. I was this way for over a week. I bought a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets which benefited me greatly. After using two bottles, I was able to work again. WOMAN DENTIST, REDS' VICTIM, NOW WAITRESS

Russian Refugee Finds Aid in Denver Thru Clubs.

FATHER SLAIN

Mother Exiled to Siberia, Husband Lost.

DENVER, Colo.—A victim of the Bolshevist uprising in Russia, from which country she escaped after many terrifying experiences, Sofia Poushkareff, despite her linguistic accomplishments and the fact that she graduated last June from the dental college of Denver University, today is acting as a waitress in a local hotel.

The charming Ukranian woman speaks Russian, French, German, Turkish, Italian and English though it is the latter language htat she has some difficulty with and until she masters it more thoroughly her certificate to practice dentistry is being held up.

In the meantime, she says, she must earn a living, and is performing the duties of a waitress in a smart coffee shop here.

Beset By Troubles

It was during t he Russian revolution and following assumption of power by the Bolshevists that Madame Pouskareli found herself faced with a world of difficulties.

"They swept down upon us like a battalion," she said. "My father, a professional man, was killed. My mother and sister were exiled to Siberia; my child died of want and exposure. My husband, who had been a captain in the army of the Czar, was reported missing, and I, as a nurse in the "White" army escaped by way of Constantinople and made my way to America."

Small of stature, with flashing black eyes glowing in a face made serious by much trouble, Madame Poushkareff seems determined to conquer sorrow.

After her arrival in Colorado, the young Russian refugee, through efforts of members of the Colorado Federation of Women's Clubs was enabled to procure a scholarship in the Denver University dental college, completing her studies last June.

Forced To Be Waitress

"But there was some slight hitch when I applied for my certificate to practice," she explained, "and I will be delayed in opening offices.

"I must live, though—and I must save money for my mother and sister. So I have become a waitress.

"There are many tears in such a job, but also much joy. For, to my table come many persons from all over the world. They speak languages I know well, and talk to me when they learn that I know what they say.

It's Cruel to "Physic" a Child

DR. CALDWELL AT AGE 83

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

do you get up feeling rocky?

Or, do you feel all tired-out and aching in every bone and muscle—bad taste prevailing — not wanting any breakfast — grouchy and miserable and just driving yourself to work by main force?

When you feel this way you are hopelessly beaten before you start. And it's all because your red-blood-cells are below normal. That's why you need S. S. S.

And when you build up your blood with S. S. S. that sluggish, let-down feeling, as well as rheumatism, pimples, boils and other skin troubles disappear.

Begin taking S. S. S. today. Build up your blood. Feel the quick return of health, strength and energy. And you'll get up in the morning glad you're living. S. S. S. is sold at all good druggists. Get the larger size. It's more economical.

EAST LIVERPOOL — AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

MONDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1925.

Absent Voters, Attention!

Judging from the number of applications received by the board of deputy state supervisors of elections, Columbiana county electors have forgotten that the Ohio legislature placed an absent voters' law on the statute books in 1917.

Although the 30-day period designated for the acceptance of requests for ballots from voters who expect to be absent from their home precinct on election day expires next Saturday, less than 100 applications have been filed.

This poor showing indicates either a lack of interest in the selection of municipal, township, board of education and judicial officers as well as indifference to the fate of special proposals, to be submitted, on Tuesday, November 3, or electors are unmindful of their privileges under the enactment.

If business or pleasure calls you away from your home city, vote before you go. Or, if you neglect to do so, mail your application for ballots. Don't disfranchise yourself.

Tax Reduction

It looks as if the leading business of the country for the next three months or so will be reducing federal taxes. So everybody might as well get into the game. It's everybody's business, anyhow. The hearings opened at Washington by the house committee, with Secretary Mellon's recommendations, make a good starter.

Inasmuch as the small incomes benefited most by the last reduction, it is right that the large incomes should have an inning now. There will be little objection to lowering the surtaxes about one-half, to relieve the big fellows and stimulate business enterprise. That is, provided the little fellows can still feel that they are sharing as fully as they should in the cutting of these tax melons. There must be some cutting all along the line.

If the treasury program really includes, as it is understood to, the repeal of the "earned income" exemption. Mr. Mellon may expect hostility on that point if not elsewhere. That exemption was warmly welcomed last year, not only because it meant a saving to so large a class of taxpayers but because it is considered proper in principle. Most citizens agree that income obtained by useful work deserves more consideration than income derived from capital or gifts, without current effort.

There will be plenty of argument about the proper exemption level above which income taxes are to be levied, as well as about the rates.

There will be endless argument, too, about the value of the federal inheritance tax, which if it is not repealed is sure to be greatly modified.

Two Feudists Have Shaken Hands

Reduced to its simplest terms, the treaty of Locarno is important because it seems to end the feud between France and Germany.

It is as if two feudist families in the Kentucky mountains, after generations of mutual killing, had wearied of the senseless slaughter and suffering and come together to shake hands, agreeing to submit their quarrels to the law courts.

Human nature being what it is, this agreement does not necessarily insure peace between the feudists. But it seems better insurance than any other pledges given since the World war. It is evidently no more formal composition of statesmen, to be blown away by the first breath of popular passion, but a pact which has its roots in the popular feeling of both countries. Treaties can be made good only by the will of the people. So this treaty has the very best of auspices.

France and Germany, after an enmity reaching back for many centuries, have agreed to do their best to get along together. They have reinforced the friendly word and hand-clasp by solemn pledges before the world, and by common-sense measures calculated to minimize friction between them.

Peace for some years, at least, seems assured. And peace, maintained on such terms, may grow to be a normal situation, as hatred and warfare were normal before.

Engine Economy

In a recent airplane race in the east for small, light planes, everybody was surprised to find that the race was won by the "weakest motor." It was an air-cooled motor of only 16.7 horsepower. Mounted in a small biplane, it made the surprising speed of 76.4 miles an hour. Its fuel consumption was very small.

There need not have been so much surprise. Remarkable results have been attained in Europe in planes with still less power. And these results, it should hardly be necessary to say, depend more on the design of the plane itself than on the motor. It is found that a small plane of light build, and with good streamlines, offering little air resistance and requiring little power to hold it aloft, will often do as well as a big, heavy plane with a high-powered engine.

The tendency in automobiles lately has been toward smaller and lighter cars that can be driven by small, light engines, making lower original cost and high operating efficiency. The same principle should apply in planes.

First California had her real estate boom, then Florida. Now—and please don't all speak at once—which of the other 46 states will be next?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 26. — Diary of a modern Samuel Pepys: Up fairly betimes and to breakfast with Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the explorer, and then Billy De Beck, the cartoonist, took me to ride in his new gasoline buggy and he has a chauffeur, the rich zany.

Home and at my labor and found an autographed copy of Charles K. Harris' latest song, and came memories of the first tune I played on the mandolin, "After the Ball," which he wrote.

In the evening with my wife to a public house for dinner and had the tastiest thick pea soup ever I ate, and we saw Addison Mizner and Marie Dressler and that was about all. So to walk home and to bed.

What, by the way, has become of the mandolin player? George Ade immortalized him in a slang fable. Otherwise he seems forgotten. The only mandolin player I've seen in years was in San Sebastian, Spain, a strolling troubador. Callow youths now master the uke and saxaphone. The mandolin used to be sold by mail for $3.75 with five lessons free. One with finger board inlaid with pearl gave a young man almost the standing of a young blood with a fast horse. I find no mandolin teachers listed in the New York telephone book. There are still bicycles and there ought to be mandolins.

Ed Womeldorff taught almost everybody in our town to play a mandolin at 25 cents a lesson—at the home, 35 cents. Ed also played the violin, banjo and E flat cornet besides clerking in Kerr's hardware store. When he passed away he was one of the richest men in town.

In a Times Square jeweler's window, bricked and looted by robbers of rings and things, hangs a rather pathetic sign: "We have only the plush boxes left. You might as well call for them."

These little shoe box stores are special targets of cowardly marauders who travel in packs and never give a lone proprietor a chance. They enter with guns unsheathed and beat and gag him before he has a chance to fight for what likely represents years of self-sacrifice and toil. As clerks they have saved for years to have a little place for their own and then they are wiped out in a twinkle. Most of the small shop stick-up men, the police say, are what police term "rats"—lowest epithet of the underworld. They show no courage and even when they go on the unseen forays first prime themselves with drugs. They have their autos racing at the curb for quick getaways and they shoot unarmed and innocent passersby without the slightest qualm.

In one of the dramas there was a yoke of oxen used nightly. Around 8 o'clock when the traffic lull came they were driven westward across the avenue to the theatre. The driver wore a wide yellow Texas hat and a red bandanna around his throat. He was the real thing and chewed tobacco. There was fear in the eyes of the oxen and nothing I have ever seen had the appearance of being so out of place in the metropolis. Pedestrians stopped to watch them out of sight. Times Square touched off a barnyard scene several years ago when a chicken fluttered from a produce wagon crate. It was during the after-theatre rush. Thousands joined the chase and traffic was enmeshed in a Gargantuan snarl. The chicken fled down a subway kiosk and when order was restored ambulances carried three injured in the crush to hospitals. Big town—this New York!

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 26. — A recent dispatch from Berlin carried news that is likely to cause a tremendous stir in circles where the opera and drama are much discussed. This story, reported by Samuel Spewack, and given to him by Vladimar Nemirovitch, director of the Musical Studio of the Moscow Art theatre, declared that Siegfried in a sack suit is the Russian reply to an English challenge of Hamlet in knickerbockers.

Dantchenko, who is a portly person, has decided that the soviets have a monopoly in revolution, confining it to such things as politics, government, sociology, religion, and the like, and he has taken it upon himself to start something in another field. He has elected to foment discontent in artistic circles and begin an operatic revolution.

He arrived in Berlin with the announcement about Siegfried in a sack suit and declared that he would shortly take his company to America to demonstrate a belief he fostered. The belief in question is that opera can be made plausible.

When Hamlet appeared, not long ago, with all the modern trappings, theatregoers and students of the drama gasped and stood wide-eyed at the spectacle. There was the melancholy Dane, as melancholy as ever, but looking like he might have been a college boy who had just gone through the dire experience of having a co-ed break a date with him, giving his dissertation about his father's ghost and to be or not to be. And the rest of the characters might have been gentlemanly and lady-like Britishers of the present day, characteristically English, on their way to Wembley.

Hamlet Was Improved.

Reports were that the audience received the revamped piece well and declared that frock coats and toppers were very attractive as habiliments for Polonius, Laertes, and the rest. Contextually, they said, the play was not at all impaired, and that the illusion was carried through perfectly. Some even went so far as to declare that it was an improvement over the Hamlet given in clothes of the period in which he lived.

This modernization of the drama, striking a responsive chord in the person of Dantchenko, promises to bring interesting results. Already dramatic critics have expressed their views concerning it and there is a division of opinion as to what it will lead to. There are those who declare that by putting Hamlet in plus-fours the producers are bringing him closer to popular understanding and enlarging the public to which the play appeals. They declare that by stripping him of his antiquated vestments Hamlet is made more plausible, but the illusion created is more real than before.

The opposition decry the movement and expect it to degrade dramatic art. There are loud outcries that it will destroy the dramatic atmosphere that has always surrounded it, making it a burlesque of the original. They say it removes the abstruse and the intellectual feeling inspired by the original and it takes it out of the hands of Shakespeare and exposes it to the ravages of modernism. They aver that such things have gone too far and some of them point to the burlesque of Shaw's "Saint Joan," recently given in Vienna, as an illustration of what is coming.

The impression that Dantchenko and his singing actors will make in New York when they present Carmen is, of course, conjectural. He plans to present an entirely new version of Bizet's work, which for many years, seemed doomed to extinction, but which has risen to undreamed of popularity until its stirring motifs have been declared by many to be the most thrilling in opera.

Not So Artificial.

In this new version he plans to prove that singers can act, that a libretto can be made dramatic, and that a chorus, instead of being deterrent to action helps it by being shelved on a platform and treated as a vocal orchestra. He also plans to find a formula whereby singers can appear in sack suits, without makeup, and with stage trappings and swords. His contention here is that there will be less artificiality and better illusion.

He points to the fact that the Moscow Art theatre many years ago played Tchekov without makeup. The shooting scene was disposed of and the actor merely stamped his feet. Yet the illusion was preserved because the actors were so well established in their roles. He declared that the opera, if it does not find a singer that can act, will die of stagnation, for, to use his words, "either musical drama is presented or an opera becomes a concert marred by masquerade and bad acting."

This view is interesting in that it is striking at the outcry which for years has been heard from opera goers, namely, that the singers are gauche in their movements if they attempt them, that they are often so affected and effervescent as to render their performance ridiculous, or that they stand transfixed to the stake, singing their parts with mechanical precision. Dantchenko's contention is that if Siegfried were played by a genuine actor, the part is more convincing than if it were played by a singing puppet, and that often the singing puppet destroys his art as a musician by his poor acting. Siegfried could sing or speak his lines and could wear a sack suit too, if he were a real actor and it would be far superior to the singing automaton, moving as the director bids. He says he merely wished to show the way so tha tothers will follow and perhaps find a better means than he intends to try. His greatest goal is to bring the theatre to the opera and strip it of what he terms faded tinsel.

Russia is divided on the question and there is no little bitterness in the hostile camps. The most bitter opponents, however, declare that the renovation of the libretto is an interesting experiment.

Shoes sent to chilly Alaska from this country in seven months of this year numbered 20,558 pairs for men and boys and 8,072 pairs for women, while those shipped to sunny Hawaii included 98,613 for males and 48,692 for females.

EAST LIVERPOOL — AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

MONDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1925.

Absent Voters, Attention!

Judging from the number of applications received by the board of deputy state supervisors of elections, Columbiana county electors have forgotten that the Ohio legislature placed an absent voters' law on the statute books in 1917.

Although the 30-day period designated for the acceptance of requests for ballots from voters who expect to be absent from their home precinct on election day expires next Saturday, less than 100 applications have been filed.

This poor showing indicates either a lack of interest in the selection of municipal, township, board of education and judicial officers as well as indifference to the fate of special proposals, to be submitted, on Tuesday, November 3, or electors are unmindful of their privileges under the enactment.

If business or pleasure calls you away from your home city, vote before you go. Or, if you neglect to do so, mail your application for ballots. Don't disfranchise yourself.

Tax Reduction

It looks as if the leading business of the country for the next three months or so will be reducing federal taxes. So everybody might as well get into the game. It's everybody's business, anyhow. The hearings opened at Washington by the house committee, with Secretary Mellon's recommendations, make a good starter.

Inasmuch as the small incomes benefited most by the last reduction, it is right that the large incomes should have an inning now. There will be little objection to lowering the surtaxes about one-half, to relieve the big fellows and stimulate business enterprise. That is, provided the little fellows can still feel that they are sharing as fully as they should in the cutting of these tax melons. There must be some cutting all along the line.

If the treasury program really includes, as it is understood to, the repeal of the "earned income" exemption. Mr. Mellon may expect hostility on that point if not elsewhere. That exemption was warmly welcomed last year, not only because it meant a saving to so large a class of taxpayers but because it is considered proper in principle. Most citizens agree that income obtained by useful work deserves more consideration than income derived from capital or gifts, without current effort.

There will be plenty of argument about the proper exemption level above which income taxes are to be levied, as well as about the rates.

There will be endless argument, too, about the value of the federal inheritance tax, which if it is not repealed is sure to be greatly modified.

Two Feudists Have Shaken Hands

Reduced to its simplest terms, the treaty of Locarno is important because it seems to end the feud between France and Germany.

It is as if two feudist families in the Kentucky mountains, after generations of mutual killing, had wearied of the senseless slaughter and suffering and come together to shake hands, agreeing to submit their quarrels to the law courts.

Human nature being what it is, this agreement does not necessarily insure peace between the feudists. But it seems better insurance than any other pledges given since the World war. It is evidently no more formal composition of statesmen, to be blown away by the first breath of popular passion, but a pact which has its roots in the popular feeling of both countries. Treaties can be made good only by the will of the people. So this treaty has the very best of auspices.

France and Germany, after an enmity reaching back for many centuries, have agreed to do their best to get along together. They have reinforced the friendly word and hand-clasp by solemn pledges before the world, and by common-sense measures calculated to minimize friction between them.

Peace for some years, at least, seems assured. And peace, maintained on such terms, may grow to be a normal situation, as hatred and warfare were normal before.

Engine Economy

In a recent airplane race in the east for small, light planes, everybody was surprised to find that the race was won by the "weakest motor." It was an air-cooled motor of only 16.7 horsepower. Mounted in a small biplane, it made the surprising speed of 76.4 miles an hour. Its fuel consumption was very small.

There need not have been so much surprise. Remarkable results have been attained in Europe in planes with still less power. And these results, it should hardly be necessary to say, depend more on the design of the plane itself than on the motor. It is found that a small plane of light build, and with good streamlines, offering little air resistance and requiring little power to hold it aloft, will often do as well as a big, heavy plane with a high-powered engine.

The tendency in automobiles lately has been toward smaller and lighter cars that can be driven by small, light engines, making lower original cost and high operating efficiency. The same principle should apply in planes.

First California had her real estate boom, then Florida. Now—and please don't all speak at once—which of the other 46 states will be next?

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 26. — A recent dispatch from Berlin carried news that is likely to cause a tremendous stir in circles where the opera and drama are much discussed. They say it removes the abstruse and the intellectual feeling inspired by the original and it takes it out of the hands of Shakespeare and exposes it to the ravages of modernism. They aver that such things have gone too far and some of them point to the burlesque of Shaw's "Saint Joan," recently given in Vienna, as an illustration of what is coming.

The impression that Dantchenko and his singing actors will make in New York when they present Carmen is, of course, conjectural. He plans to present an entirely new version of Bizet's work, which for many years, seemed doomed to extinction, but which has risen to undreamed of popularity until its stirring motifs have been declared by many to be the most thrilling in opera.

Not So Artificial.

In this new version he plans to prove that singers can act, that a libretto can be made dramatic, and that a chorus, instead of being deterrent to action helps it by being shelved on a platform and treated as a vocal orchestra. He also plans to find a formula whereby singers can appear in sack suits, without makeup, and with stage trappings and swords. His contention here is that there will be less artificiality and better illusion.

He points to the fact that the Moscow Art theatre many years ago played Tchekov without makeup. The shooting scene was disposed of and the actor merely stamped his feet. Yet the illusion was preserved because the actors were so well established in their roles. He declared that the opera, if it does not find a singer that can act, will die of stagnation, for, to use his words, "either musical drama is presented or an opera becomes a concert marred by masquerade and bad acting."

This view is interesting in that it is striking at the outcry which for years has been heard from opera goers, namely, that the singers are gauche in their movements if they attempt them, that they are often so affected and effervescent as to render their performance ridiculous, or that they stand transfixed to the stage, singing their parts with mechanical precision. Dantchenko's contention is that if Siegfried were played by a genuine actor, the part is more convincing than if it were played by a singing puppet, and that often the singing puppet destroys his art as a musician by his poor acting. Siegfried could sing or speak his lines and could wear a sack suit too, if he were a real actor and it would be far superior to the singing automaton, moving as the director bids. He says he merely wished to show the way so tha tothers will follow and perhaps find a better means than he intends to try. His greatest goal is to bring the theatre to the opera and strip it of what he terms faded tinsel.

Russia is divided on the question and there is no little bitterness in the hostile camps. The most bitter opponents, however, declare that the renovation of the libretto is an interesting experiment.

The Story Of A Girl Who Dared

By Ethel M. Dell

CHAPTER 78.

It was an exhilirating moment. Amoura, unmoved by Tommy Loughley's agitation, studied, analyzed him. She wondered if all of his feelings were real; if men, when they were proposing, did not act as they thought men proposing marriage should act, instead of as they really felt.

"Oh, you know what I'm trying to say, Amoura!" he exclaimed with a more intense show of feeling.

His eyes, she thought, did not indicate the ardor he was uttering. "Yes, Tommy, I know what you're trying to say.'

"Then," he said, taking her hands in his tense grasp, "Say the words that will make me the happiest man in the world."

Too dramatic, she thought. This was the way men did it in novels, on the stage. She tried to appear deeply affected. "I'm sorry, Tommy. . . .. I like you, and all that . . . But, but . . . . I don't love you."

He winced, but did not relax his grip upon her hands. "Tell me, Amoura, is there any hope? . . . . I've thought of nothing but you since you went away . . . were stolen away."

She turned her eyes away, and was silent for a moment before she answered: "I don't know, Tommy."

If her heart could have spoken it would have said, "She does know."

"Marry me, Amoura, and we will travel, wander, seek adventures. You won't have to be tied down to this conventional life you detest. I know how you feel, I understand you. You don't want to be tied down. I want a pal, not a humdrum wife. . . ."

How could she send him away without hurting him? What could she say? She must not make him suffer as she had suffered—as she was suffering. Ah, Philip, she thought, if only you knew!

"Be patient with me Tommy. Wait awhile. I'm still upset. I——'

"Yes, I know.' H squeezed her hand hopefully.

Uncomfortable, she arose, pulling her hands free tenderly. "Let's join mother and father. I think they'd like to play bridge. Do you mind?"

"Bridge? Of course, of course."

Despite her good resolutions of the previous day, Amoura slept late in the morning. When she opened her eyes first, early, she felt as if she were going to have a headache, and sought to defeat it by staying in bed until she went to sleep again. Her mother awakened her after 10 o'clock.

"Your young man was rather reluctant to depart," the visitor observed, sitting down on the edge of the bed.

"Yes. He doesn't know that Westland goes to bed at 11 o'clock."

"Your father complained about being kept up so late," and she laughed. "You know he never comes in from the club before one o'clock. That man!"

"Father is getting old."

She was not thinking of her father, but of Tommy.

"Oh, don't say that, dear, don't say that! It means I'm getting old, too. Old . . ." she looked at her hands, then at her arms.

"Oh, you're still beautiful mother."

"I hope so, my daughter, but I fear you're only flattering me." Her laugh was not entirely heartfelt. "But get up. Philip Weinrich is coming over for lunch."

"Mother!" Amoura raised up in bed, "I don't want to see him."

"He just called up, like he used to, and said he was coming over for lunch. What could I say?"

"Oh, you could have told him not to, if you had wanted." She regarded her mother with a frown.

Mrs. J. Reginald Ainsley patted her daughter's hand, and smiled faintly as she said, "You can have Philip if you want him, Amoura." With that she arose nad left the room, with Amoura staring after her.

Two-thiry o'clock in the afternoon. Amoura and Philip alone in the library, either by accident or design. Amoura, nervous, is idly turning the pages of a book. Philip, lighting a cigaret, is regarding her. Suddenly, without puffing at the cigaret, he tosses it into a tray, and takes Amoura's hand, causing her to whirl around and face him.

"Amoura, you love me, don't you?"

Vest Pocket Battery May Run Car 10 Days

Leningrad.—A discovery that may have a revolutionary effect on industry is claimed by A. F. Joffe of the Academy of Science. In experimenting, Joffre says, he obtained a tremendous concentration of electrical energy in a very small object. The accumulator which he constructed and charged with energy, "sufficient to drive the most powerful motor car for ten days," is small enough to go into a waistcoat pocket, he says.

The scientist hopes it may soon be possible to apply the discovery to general industry on a large scale.

Home-made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly

Finest cough medicine you ever used. Family supply easily made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

She turned her eyes away, and was silent for a moment before she answered: "I don't know, Tommy."

If her heart could have spoken it would have said, "She does know."

"Marry me, Amoura, and we will travel, wander, seek adventures. You won't have to be tied down to this conventional life you detest. I know how you feel, I understand you. You don't want to be tied down. I want a pal, not a humdrum wife. . . ."

How could she send him away without hurting him? What could she say? She must not make him suffer as she had suffered—as she was suffering. Ah, Philip, she thought, if only you knew!

"Be patient with me Tommy. Wait awhile. I'm still upset. I——'

"Yes, I know.' H squeezed her hand hopefully.

Uncomfortable, she arose, pulling her hands free tenderly. "Let's join mother and father. I think they'd like to play bridge. Do you mind?"

"Bridge? Of course, of course."

Despite her good resolutions of the previous day, Amoura slept late in the morning. When she opened her eyes first, early, she felt as if she were going to have a headache, and sought to defeat it by staying in bed until she went to sleep again. Her mother awakened her after 10 o'clock.

"Your young man was rather reluctant to depart," the visitor observed, sitting down on the edge of the bed.

"Yes. He doesn't know that Westland goes to bed at 11 o'clock."

"Your father complained about being kept up so late," and she laughed. "You know he never comes in from the club before one o'clock. That man!"

"Father is getting old."

She was not thinking of her father, but of Tommy.

"Oh, don't say that, dear, don't say that! It means I'm getting old, too. Old . . ." she looked at her hands, then at her arms.

"Oh, you're still beautiful mother."

"I hope so, my daughter, but I fear you're only flattering me." Her laugh was not entirely heartfelt. "But get up. Philip Weinrich is coming over for lunch."

"Mother!" Amoura raised up in bed, "I don't want to see him."

"He just called up, like he used to, and said he was coming over for lunch. What could I say?"

"Oh, you could have told him not to, if you had wanted." She regarded her mother with a frown.

Mrs. J. Reginald Ainsley patted her daughter's hand, and smiled faintly as she said, "You can have Philip if you want him, Amoura." With that she arose nad left the room, with Amoura staring after her.

Two-thiry o'clock in the afternoon. Amoura and Philip alone in the library, either by accident or design. Amoura, nervous, is idly turning the pages of a book. Philip, lighting a cigaret, is regarding her. Suddenly, without puffing at the cigaret, he tosses it into a tray, and takes Amoura's hand, causing her to whirl around and face him.

"Amoura, you love me, don't you?"

Vest Pocket Battery May Run Car 10 Days

Leningrad.—A discovery that may have a revolutionary effect on industry is claimed by A. F. Joffe of the Academy of Science. In experimenting, Joffre says, he obtained a tremendous concentration of electrical energy in a very small object. The accumulator which he constructed and charged with energy, "sufficient to drive the most powerful motor car for ten days," is small enough to go into a waistcoat pocket, he says.

The scientist hopes it may soon be possible to apply the discovery to general industry on a large scale.

Home-made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly
Finest cough medicine you ever used. Family supply easily made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SEEKS VETERAN IN ASYLUMS AND JAILS

Mother Hunts for Son, World War Soldier.

Marquette, Mich.—Traveling about the country visiting penal institutions and asylums, hoping to find some trace of her son, Joe Anderson, World war veteran, who disappeared from Detroit, March 6, 1924, Mrs. Margaret Anderson, sixty-seven, has arrived here.

Her son enlisted when he was not yet sixteen and was assigned to Company K of the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Infantry. He was gassed overseas. Later he was charged with desertion, convicted and sent to Leavenworth prison. Mrs. Anderson walked from her home at Sioux Falls to Washington, where she sought clemency for her son from President Harding. She contended Joe was not responsible for his act because of having been gassed. President Harding paroled him.

After his parole Joe went to work at his trade as machinist. At the end of nine months he suddenly disappeared and the mother has never heard anything of him since.

Mrs. Anderson visited the Ford plants here at L'Anse and the asylum at Newberry. She said her son might be going under the name of John E. Johnson and has always given his address as Stevens Point, Wis. He is over six feet tall, thin and of blond complexion and has a scar on his chest on the left side where he was wounded in the war.

She said she is making her way to Chicago, visiting asylums and industrial centers in hope of finding some trace of her missing son.

MANY BANKRUPT AS HARD TIMES HIT NIPPONESE

Japan Suffers Worst Business Depression of Modern Era.

BANKS AFFECTED

Steps Taken to Aid Depositors and Safeguard Stability.

TOKIO.—"Hard times" have descended upon the industrial and commercial world of Japan and indications are that the year 1925 will mark the worst period of business depression the country has experienced in modern times.

An indication of the prevailing tendency is seen in teh rapid increase in bankruptcies. During the first eight months of 1925 no less than 312 business firms were adjudged bankrupt by the District Court, a larger number of failures than was recorded during all of 1924.

Banks Hard Hit.

Although all kinds of business is feeling the effect of this depression, the banks have been hit especially hard. So precarious has the position of some of the banks become that the government has been forced to adopt drastic steps for the protection of depositors and in the interest of the financial stability of the country as a whole. Approximately 75 banks whose standing was found to be doubtful have been summarily closed under orders of the finance department of the government.

Most of these banks were small concerns, some of them of the "mushroom" type that sprang up during the period of inflation during and after the World War. It is not the small and struggling banks alone, however, who have experienced difficulties in reecnt months.

The Bank of Taiwan, Formosa, which is a semi-government establishment, has recently been in difficulties. So serious did the situation become that the government was compelled to order a substantial reduction in the capital stock of the bank. This cut down the burden of interest and dividend expenses which the bank was bearing and prevented a complete failure. It meant, however, a heavy loss to stockholders through reduction of both capital and income.

The situation prevailing with regard to the smaller banks has weakened public confidence in these institutions with the result that deposits in the larger banks have greatly increased. This transfer of money from the weaker banks to the stronger ones has caused a difficult situation for the larger banks. They are compelled to pay huge sums in interest on these deposits while general business conditions are such that they are having difficulty in diverting this money to revenue-producing channels.

Firms Forced to Wall.

Besides the banks, many commercial firms have gone under and others are having a hard time to keep their heads above water. Manufacturing, shipping, power, importing, exporting and trading firms are listed among the growing number of bankrupts. So far there have been no failures of important newspapers, but several magazine concerns have gone to the wall and it is no secret that it is only by subsidies that some of the newspapers have been enabled to keep going.

Those who profess familiarity with the fundamental financial and industrial conditions of the country, however, see in the prevailing hard times the beginnings of Japan's commercial reconstruction and reorganization. They point out that, general speaking, the firms that have failed have been institutions that were established during an abnormal period in the nation's economic life. Elimination of these unstable elements was bound to come sometime. Hardship and losses are the inevitable result of the process, they contend, but the final outcome will be to "clean up" Japan's economic structure and place it upon a firmer foundation than it has been before.

Because of more efficient methods European farmers in Tunisia, raise on one-tenth the area tilled by the natives, fully seven-tenths of the total production of the country.

HEADACHE Don't Suffer! Get a 10c package of Dr. James Headache Powders

Any kind of a headache is relieved in two minutes. Distress and pain vanish, your head clears and you are again ready for work or play. Druggists sell millions of "Dr. James' Headache Powders" because they are safe.

Piles Disappear No Cutting or Salves Needed.

External treatments seldom cure Piles.

Nor do surgical operations.

The cause is inside—bad circulation.

The blood is stagnant, the veins flabby.

The bowel walls are weak, the parts almost dead.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send a fresh current through stagnant pools. Internal treatment is the one safe method. Ointments and cutting won't do it.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere under guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at C. G. Anderson's, who will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

Champion Strong Man Conquered by Cupid; Wins French Beauty

PARIS — Charles Rigoulot, "The Strongest Man in the World" was not strong enough to resist the charms of pretty Mlle. Colin, so now they're married. Rigoulot won the weight lifting championship during the Olympic games, and since has challenged all comers. A few weeks ago he outlifted Cadine, the former Olympic champion and was crowned the "World's Strongest Man."

With his new title Rigoulot was engaged by a movie company to pose for a series of pictures. It was at the studio that he met the captivating Louise Roche. During the twenty-two years of her life Louise had never lifted anything heavier than a flat iron, but friends say she knocked Rigoulot right off his feet.

SEEKS VETERAN IN ASYLUMS AND JAILS

Mother Hunts for Son, World War Soldier.

Marquette, Mich.—Traveling about the country visiting penal institutions and asylums, hoping to find some trace of her son, Joe Anderson, World war veteran, who disappeared from Detroit, March 6, 1924, Mrs. Margaret Anderson, sixty-seven, has arrived here.

Her son enlisted when he was not yet sixteen and was assigned to Company K of the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Infantry. He was gassed overseas. Later he was charged with desertion, convicted and sent to Leavenworth prison. Mrs. Anderson walked from her home at Sioux Falls to Washington, where she sought clemency for her son from President Harding. She contended Joe was not responsible for his act because of having been gassed. President Harding paroled him.

After his parole Joe went to work at his trade as machinist. At the end of nine months he suddenly disappeared and the mother has never heard anything of him since.

Mrs. Anderson visited the Ford plants here at L'Anse and the asylum at Newberry. She said her son might be going under the name of John E. Johnson and has always given his address as Stevens Point, Wis. He is over six feet tall, thin and of blond complexion and has a scar on his chest on the left side where he was wounded in the war.

She said she is making her way to Chicago, visiting asylums and industrial centers in hope of finding some trace of her missing son.

MANY BANKRUPT AS HARD TIMES HIT NIPPONESE

Japan Suffers Worst Business Depression of Modern Era.

BANKS AFFECTED

Steps Taken to Aid Depositors and Safeguard Stability.

TOKIO.—"Hard times" have descended upon the industrial and commercial world of Japan and indications are that the year 1925 will mark the worst period of business depression the country has experienced in modern times.

An indication of the prevailing tendency is seen in teh rapid increase in bankruptcies. During the first eight months of 1925 no less than 312 business firms were adjudged bankrupt by the District Court, a larger number of failures than was recorded during all of 1924.

Banks Hard Hit.

Although all kinds of business is feeling the effect of this depression, the banks have been hit especially hard. So precarious has the position of some of the banks become that the government has been forced to adopt drastic steps for the protection of depositors and in the interest of the financial stability of the country as a whole. Approximately 75 banks whose standing was found to be doubtful have been summarily closed under orders of the finance department of the government.

Most of these banks were small concerns, some of them of the "mushroom" type that sprang up during the period of inflation during and after the World War. It is not the small and struggling banks alone, however, who have experienced difficulties in reecnt months.

The Bank of Taiwan, Formosa, which is a semi-government establishment, has recently been in difficulties. So serious did the situation become that the government was compelled to order a substantial reduction in the capital stock of the bank. This cut down the burden of interest and dividend expenses which the bank was bearing and prevented a complete failure. It meant, however, a heavy loss to stockholders through reduction of both capital and income.

The situation prevailing with regard to the smaller banks has weakened public confidence in these institutions with the result that deposits in the larger banks have greatly increased. This transfer of money from the weaker banks to the stronger ones has caused a difficult situation for the larger banks. They are compelled to pay huge sums in interest on these deposits while general business conditions are such that they are having difficulty in diverting this money to revenue-producing channels.

Firms Forced to Wall.

Besides the banks, many commercial firms have gone under and others are having a hard time to keep their heads above water. Manufacturing, shipping, power, importing, exporting and trading firms are listed among the growing number of bankrupts. So far there have been no failures of important newspapers, but several magazine concerns have gone to the wall and it is no secret that it is only by subsidies that some of the newspapers have been enabled to keep going.

Those who profess familiarity with the fundamental financial and industrial conditions of the country, however, see in the prevailing hard times the beginnings of Japan's commercial reconstruction and reorganization. They point out that, general speaking, the firms that have failed have been institutions that were established during an abnormal period in the nation's economic life. Elimination of these unstable elements was bound to come sometime. Hardship and losses are the inevitable result of the process, they contend, but the final outcome will be to "clean up" Japan's economic structure and place it upon a firmer foundation than it has been before.

Because of more efficient methods European farmers in Tunisia, raise on one-tenth the area tilled by the natives, fully seven-tenths of the total production of the country.

HEADACHE

Don't Suffer! Get a 10c package of Dr. James Headache Powders

Piles Disappear

No Cutting or Salves Needed.

External treatments seldom cure Piles.

Nor do surgical operations.

The cause is inside—bad circulation.

The blood is stagnant, the veins flabby.

The bowel walls are weak, the parts almost dead.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send a fresh current through stagnant pools. Internal treatment is the one safe method. Ointments and cutting won't do it.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere under guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at C. G. Anderson's, who will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

Champion Strong Man Conquered by Cupid; Wins French Beauty

PARIS — Charles Rigoulot, "The Strongest Man in the World" was not strong enough to resist the charms of pretty Mlle. Colin, so now they're married. Rigoulot won the weight lifting championship during the Olympic games, and since has challenged all comers. A few weeks ago he outlifted Cadine, the former Olympic champion and was crowned the "World's Strongest Man."

With his new title Rigoulot was engaged by a movie company to pose for a series of pictures. It was at the studio that he met the captivating Louise Roche. During the twenty-two years of her life Louise had never lifted anything heavier than a flat iron, but friends say she knocked Rigoulot right off his feet.

WAYNE TOWNSHIP ROAD MEETING

A good roads meeting will be held in Wayne township at noon next Thursday on the farm of Frank Rice, located on the Lisbon-Salineville road, a period being set aside for the purpose by Mr. Rice during a farm sale.

At this meeting addresses will be made by County Commissioner Conrad Berg and L. H. Johnson. L. M. Kyes, of East Palestine, may also speak.

Wayne township is vitally interested in the proposed $950,000 bond issue, as under the road improvement program of the commissioners as outlined, Wayne township will receive five miles of concrete-surfaced improved road for the payment of $5,700, and this money distributed over a period of 10 years. The tax duplicate of Wayne ownship is the lowest in the county, the valuation as the duplicate now shows being only $774,540. On this basis the township is paying but 0.6 per cent of the entire issue of $950,000. Under these circumstances Wayne will have the Salineville-Lisbon road connected in that township for the sum of $5,700, and the tax that is to be paid back to the county over a 10-year period amount to but $570 per year.

In suggesting that the road meeting be held on his farm, Mr. Rice advised the county commissioners that he would give 90 minutes for the discussion of the issue during the noon period.

LISBON-PALESTINE ROAD HEARING

On account of two courts being in session next Friday, it is likely that the road hearing on the Lisbon-East Palestine road, wherein a route is to be selected for designation as an inter-county highway, may result in the hearing being held in the law library.

The hearing is scheduled to open at 10 o'clock Friday morning. Three locations for the route has been proposed, although it has been announced that a hearing will be also held on any combination of route for this road not already designated, but which may be presented by those interested.

The ruling of the commission, which has just been received in Lisbon by County Auditor Charles E. Hamilton, reads:

"The commission coming on to consider the application of the auditor of Columbiana county, requesting permission to dispense with a reappraisement of the real estate in said county or any sub-division thereof, in the year 1925, as provided in section 5549 G. C. as amended in O. L. 111, page 418, alleging in said application that said real estate was appraised in the year 1924 and further alleging that said property was, and now is, appraised at its true value in money for taxation purposes:

REAPPRAISEMENT IS ELIMINATED

Although the state legislature passed a law at its last session ordering a reappraisement of all real estate and property in every county in Ohio during 1925, Columbiana county has been eliminated from such action, according to a ruling of the state tax commission which has just been handed down at Columbus.

The ruling of the commission, which has just been received in Lisbon by County Auditor Charles E. Hamilton, reads:

"The commission coming on to consider the application of the auditor of Columbiana county, requesting permission to dispense with a reappraisement of the real estate in said county or any sub-division thereof, in the year 1925, as provided in section 5549 G. C. as amended in O. L. 111, page 418, alleging in said application that said real estate was appraised in the year 1924 and further alleging that said property was, and now is, appraised at its true value in money for taxation purposes:

"Finds that said real estate was assessed in the year 1924."

A certified copy of this order has been filed with County Auditor Hamilton.

REFUSES TO CONCEDE LOSS OF BIG TEN RACE

Stagg Asserts Chicago Has Fighting Chance, Recalling Fact That Maroon Won Title Year Ago After Playing Three Tie Games; Says Penn Won Saturday Because it Played Better Football.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—They die hard in the Stagg family, if at all.

Defeated by Pennsylvania on Saturday, while Michigan and Iowa were going to the pace in the Conference free-for-all by winning from Illinois and Ohio State, respectively, Alonzo Stagg, the extremely young old man of Chicago football, decided to concede that his team would not win the Big Ten title again.

In his pensive, deliberate way, he summoned the following arguments by way of rebuttal:

Chicago won the championship last year after all seemed lost. It won in spite of three tie games and this year, to date, it has only one. That anything can happen to Michigan and Iowa, although the latter's prospects are almost excessively plausible with only Wisconsin and Minnesota to beat.

"But we have a fighting chance and that's all any man can ask," he added.

"We played good football; Pennsylvania played better,' was his second comment.

He didn't say, however, that Chicago played good football only after the eastern outfit had scored what proved to be the winning touchdown. The Maroon seems to be notorious as a slow starter, this being its cardinal weakness, unless one wishes to stress the team's lack of versatility on attack.

It doesn't seem capable of varying its plays, although Stagg has given it plenty of good ones. On Saturday, he uncovered several passing plays that looked good until the passer let the ball go. In most cases, it was passed beyond the receiver or the latter failed to get in the clear.

There appears to be no good reason for this ineptitude on the part of the Chicago team. It is big, it is fast and it does not lack for veteran material. Yet it really clicks only when running plays are under way and the day has gone when a team can hope to strong-arm its path to touchdowns.

As the situation stands, Chicago has only two scoring methods. One is to use "five yards" McCarty on off tackle and line plays. The other is to get Bob Curley into position for a field goal. This young man doesn't need much maneuvering, any spot inside the fifty yard line being suitable to his exceedingly well behaved ankle.

As a matter of fact, Curley has kicked Chicago into one Conference title and right on the heels of another during the last two seasons.

Give the young man a little more weight and it would be something of a different operation to keep him out of an all American selection. As it is, he is the welterweight personification of what Chicago needs most—an open field runner.

It fairly oozes power on the attack, with McCarty, Ernwein, Timme and Curley in operation. It has very little deception.

The power is amplified as one comes to the forward line, averaging close to 200 pounds.

Just a very good football team that cannot seem to realize its best potentialities, in spite of what one of the greatest football coaches of all times can do.

Panthers Do Things Up Right; Dedicate Field and Beat Plaid

By KATHARINE BRUSH.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 26.—Whether it is that the gods weep when they see a lady reporter attempting to cover gentlemens' sports, I know not, but anyway, it always rains. It rained Saturday. It rained on the new Pitt stadium. It rained on the 45,000 spectators huddled in the new Pitt stadium. It rained on the broad blue-and-orange backs of the Pitt Panthers, and on the not less broad scarlet backs of the warriors of Carnegie Tech. The only people at the game on whom it didn't rain were the sporting writers, sitting pretty under glass in the press box. Much to my indignation they don't allow women in the press box at football games, and so I sat in the open and it rained on me. In the middle of the first quarter it stopped raining, of course, but that was locking the stable after the horse was stolen. Everybody by that time was much too wet to care.

But there's no use talking—aside from rain, Pittsburgh does know how to do things properly. When they dedicated a new stadium, they see to it that the team that belongs to the stadium wins the game. I saw the Yale Bowl dedicated with a Yale licking that I'd rather not talk about, and I saw Michigan run up a score so high that they were calling for adding machines in the press box the day the Ohio State stadium was dedicated. But Pittsburgh has a great sense of the fitness of things. The beautiful new monument to the athlethic valor of the University of Pittsburgh was dedicated with a 12 0 victory.

It all began with a cross country race between Pitt and Carnegie Tech over the Schenley Park course. This took place at 11 a. m., and the trackisters won—at least, so somebody told me when I got down to breakfast. The gates of the stadium opened at 11:15, and a game between the Freshmen of the two colleges was played at 11:30. It was raining hard then, and I understand there was nobody much in the stadium but 22 mothers and 22 fathers. At 1:30 there was a parade consisting of several hundred pairs of overshoes each containing the pedal extremities of a Pitt professor or a stadium instigator or an ex-football star of Pitt. Thus the paths of gridiron glory lead but through the mud-puddles. And at 2:30 the game began.

Did you ever see seventeen miles of seats? The new Pitt stadium has that many. They weren't entirely filled at the game this afternoon. Continuing to speak in statistics, I should say that approximately 12 of the 17 miles had people in them. And not only people,but other things. Raincoats. Umbrellas. Soggy newspapers. Pieces of oil-cloth and pocket flasks. It was, all in all, quite a spectacle. The steep slops of the stadium bloomed like a florists window, with yellow slickers, and blue and red and purple feminine raincoats, and wee pink faces. And the playing field was not less remarkable to look at. The players who had issued forth immaculate became, after the first couple of downs, almost indistinguishable hunks of mud. Their faces looked like the faces of women having clay packs in a beauty shop. Their once-white legs were African in hue. The letters on the backs of their jerseys were practically obliterated, so that you couldn't tell one from the other.

Every few minutes time had to be called and towels rushed to the scene of action, so that they could wipe the mud out of their eyes. Every down sent several of them sliding on their hips in several directions. The ball was a cake of soap—in slipperiness, not in cleanliness.

But it took more than this to daunt the spirits and dull the enthusiasms of the rooters on both sides of the vast concrete cup. The cheering was loud and long, and especially effective since the walls of the stadium gave it back in a vast tumultuous echo. The bands of both institutions, Tech's in their Scottish kilts and Pitt's in dignified blue and gold uniforms were there in full force. The usual song-battle between the two cheering sections took place between the halves, and rockets were sent off at the same time by a band of collegians dressed in black hoods, so that they resembled members of the Ku Klux dipped in ink. There is a cemetery on a hill back of the Pitt stadium, and just as the largest and noisiest rocket went off a funeral procession passed on its way there. From where I sat, in the front row, the cars in the procession seemed to be rolling along on the top rim of the stadium. A wierd effect. It quite ruined my afternoon.

There was great consternation among Carnegie fans all around me because Bastian and Sebastian of the Tech team would both be out of the lineup. I know so little about the local gridiron talent that I thought they meant a man named Bastian and C. Bastian, his brother, and even gave a melancholy sigh for Mrs. Bastian, with both her boys laid up. (The above will illustrate plainly why they don't let women sit in the press box, nor put their stories on the sporting pages.)

The fact remains that neither youth was in the game until the very last, when Sebastian went in. For the most part, yes we had no Bastians. Se or otherwise.

The last half was enlivened by Gustafson's touchdown, and by a red faced worthy two seats away from me who arose in the midst of an exciting moment and sang a solo lauding the glories of West Virginia, very solemnly and, I think you'll agree somewhat inappropriately. When it was explained to him in no uncertain terms that he was in error he apologized to the crowd and subsided. Except for these two happy moments the last half was a monotony of runners who ran wide but not far, and kicks that went high but not long, and mud, and chills.

Summing up, I should say it was a good day for the Panthers and a perfectly elegant day for ducks.

Bank notes are so scarce in Educador that business may have to be curtailed.

LAUGHLIN WINS 3 TO 1 DECISION

Retain League Lead by Beating New Brighton.

On a wet and scoggy field that made good football almost impossible, the Homer Laughlin soccer club won a 3 to 1 decision over the New Brighton eleven Saturday afternoon at New Brighton.

Several changes were noticeable in the Laughlin lineup. Shaw performed at outside right in place of Bower, on the injured list, and Brown took Foster's left half. The New Brighton eleven played an aggressive game but was unable to make its kicks count. From a good pass by Haugh, Shaw missed a goal by inches in the opening half.

The second half saw play largely in New Brighton territory. Carnie proved a good mud plower, his speed enabling him to get away for the first goal. Five miutes later Strutt, of New Brighton, tied the count. Haugh made it to for Laughlin on a pass from Aldridge. After a good pass from Plant, Carnie registered the third counter for the locals.

ENGLISH PUNCHES LINE FOR SOLE TOUCHDOWN IN FIRST PERIOD OF GAME

Leader of Ceramic City Eleven, Starting in Midfield, Penetrates Lisbon Line for 50 yards in Two Plays; Final East Liverpool Offensive Puts Ball Within Feet of Enemy Goal as Whistle Ends Battle.

Pitted against a light put practically veteran Lisbon high school squad, battling in its own back yard, Coach O. V. Boone's Blue and White gridders Saturday began their Columbiana county championship campaign by defeating their county seat rivals, 6 to 0.

The affair developed into something of a duel between Captain Paul English of the Ceramic City combine and Willie Cornelli, the flash little leader of the Lisbon contingent.

As expected, Lisbon proved a tough nut to crack. They had speed, a fair defense and a strong determination to win. It was a fight from the monent the East Liverpool eleven scored its first and only touchdown until the final whistle.

The home eleven chose to take the offensive at the outset of the engagement.

Liverpool kicked to Lisbon after some scrimmage around the center of the fiedd Liverpool took the ball. English then crashed the center of the line for a twenty-yard gain. On the next down he hit the same place fro another thirty yards and a touchdown. Paul English can be credited with the first touchdown scored against Lisbon by an outside team this year. Try for the point failed.

Lisbon chose to kick. English returned the punt to Cornelli who was stopped. Lisbon attempted to punt but both sides were offside. They tried it again and Lisbon kicked out of bounds. The first quarter ended with East Liverpool six points ahead.

Liverpool gained on a pass, English to Perry. Lisbon took the ball on a punt and Hum kicked to English who made a nice return of it. He was injured in the play and time out was called. Lisbon took the ball on punt and Hum again kicked to English. English kicked to Cornelli who made a twenty-yard return. Hum kicked to English who fumbled but a Liverpool player recovered. Liverpool kicked to Cornelli, and Hum returned it.

This quarter had plenty of kick in it. English's next try was blocked and Lisbon recovered. Hum punted to McVeigh. English made a 20 yard gain around right end. English punted and the half ended.

The third and fourth periods were devoid of features save Cornelli's 50-yard run which brought up behind the East Liverpool goal posts, but, however, went for naught because Cornelli had neglected to stay on the playing field.

Within the last few minutes the East Liverpool backs began to beat down the Lisbon defensive and were within a few feet of the goal when the clash ended.

Lisbon was handicapped by the muddy condition of the field, preventing the use of their fast end runs and forward passes. Boone's aggregation lacked the services of three or four regulars.

For two whole hours the other day telephone operators in Paris gave no subscriber the wrong number. The operators were on strike.—Defiance Crescent-News.

Clash With Laughlin in West Penn Cup Tie Game.

Facing their hardest opposition of the year, the Homer Laughlin soccer club will clash with the strong Mahoning Valleys, of Youngstown, next Saturday afternoon at Newell.

The contest is one of the series in the first round of the West Penn Cup Tie competition.

The Laughlins have yet to taste defeat. Their fighting qualities have been proven in four games this season when, on each occasion they came from behind to win.

REFUSES TO CONCEDE LOSS OF BIG TEN RACE

Stagg Asserts Chicago Has Fighting Chance, Recalling Fact That Maroon Won Title Year Ago After Playing Three Tie Games; Says Penn Won Saturday Because it Played Better Football.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—They die hard in the Stagg family, if at all.

Defeated by Pennsylvania on Saturday, while Michigan and Iowa were going to the pace in the Conference free-for-all by winning from Illinois and Ohio State, respectively, Alonzo Stagg, the extremely young old man of Chicago football, decided to concede that his team would not win the Big Ten title again.

In his pensive, deliberate way, he summoned the following arguments by way of rebuttal:

Chicago won the championship last year after all seemed lost. It won in spite of three tie games and this year, to date, it has only one. That anything can happen to Michigan and Iowa, although the latter's prospects are almost excessively plausible with only Wisconsin and Minnesota to beat.

"But we have a fighting chance and that's all any man can ask," he added.

"We played good football; Pennsylvania played better,' was his second comment.

He didn't say, however, that Chicago played good football only after the eastern outfit had scored what proved to be the winning touchdown. The Maroon seems to be notorious as a slow starter, this being its cardinal weakness, unless one wishes to stress the team's lack of versatility on attack.

It doesn't seem capable of varying its plays, although Stagg has given it plenty of good ones. On Saturday, he uncovered several passing plays that looked good until the passer let the ball go. In most cases, it was passed beyond the receiver or the latter failed to get in the clear.

There appears to be no good reason for this ineptitude on the part of the Chicago team. It is big, it is fast and it does not lack for veteran material. Yet it really clicks only when running plays are under way and the day has gone when a team can hope to strong-arm its path to touchdowns.

As the situation stands, Chicago has only two scoring methods. One is to use "five yards" McCarty on off tackle and line plays. The other is to get Bob Curley into position for a field goal. This young man doesn't need much maneuvering, any spot inside the fifty yard line being suitable to his exceedingly well behaved ankle.

As a matter of fact, Curley has kicked Chicago into one Conference title and right on the heels of another during the last two seasons.

Give the young man a little more weight and it would be something of a different operation to keep him out of an all American selection. As it is, he is the welterweight personification of what Chicago needs most—an open field runner.

It fairly oozes power on the attack, with McCarty, Ernwein, Timme and Curley in operation. It has very little deception.

The power is amplified as one comes to the forward line, averaging close to 200 pounds.

Just a very good football team that cannot seem to realize its best potentialities, in spite of what one of the greatest football coaches of all times can do.

Panthers Do Things Up Right; Dedicate Field and Beat Plaid

By KATHARINE BRUSH.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 26.—Whether it is that the gods weep when they see a lady reporter attempting to cover gentlemens' sports, I know not, but anyway, it always rains. It rained Saturday. It rained on the new Pitt stadium. It rained on the 45,000 spectators huddled in the new Pitt stadium. It rained on the broad blue and orange backs of the Pitt Panthers, and on the not less broad scarlet backs of the warriors of Carnegie Tech. The only people at the game on whom it didn't rain were the sporting writers, sitting pretty under glass in the press box. Much to my indignation they don't allow women in the press box at football games, and so I sat in the open and it rained on me. In the middle of the first quarter it stopped raining, of course, but that was locking the stable after the horse was stolen. Everybody by that time was much too wet to care.

But there's no use talking—aside from rain, Pittsburgh does know how to do things properly. When they dedicated a new stadium, they see to it that the team that belongs to the stadium wins the game. I saw the Yale Bowl dedicated with a Yale licking that I'd rather not talk about, and I saw Michigan run up a score so high that they were calling for adding machines in the press box the day the Ohio State stadium was dedicated. But Pittsburgh has a great sense of the fitness of things. The beautiful new monument to the athlethic valor of the University of Pittsburgh was dedicated with a 12 0 victory.

It all began with a cross country race between Pitt and Carnegie Tech over the Schenley Park course. This took place at 11 a. m., and the trackesters won—at least, so somebody told me when I got down to breakfast. The gates of the stadium opened at 11:15, and a game between the Freshmen of the two colleges was played at 11:30. It was raining hard then, and I understand there was nobody much in the stadium but 22 mothers and 22 fathers. At 1:30 there was a parade consisting of several hundred pairs of overshoes each containing the pedal extremities of a Pitt professor or a stadium instigator or an ex-football star of Pitt. Thus the paths of gridiron glory lead but through the mud-puddles. And at 2:30 the game began.

Did you ever see seventeen miles of seats? The new Pitt stadium has that many. They weren't entirely filled at the game this afternoon. Continuing to speak in statistics, I should say that approximately 12 of the 17 miles had people in them. And not only people, but other things. Raincoats. Umbrellas. Soggy newspapers. Pieces of oil-cloth and pocket flasks. It was, all in all, quite a spectacle. The steep slops of the stadium bloomed like a florists window, with yellow slickers, and blue and red and purple feminine raincoats, and wee pink faces. And the playing field was not less remarkable to look at. The players who had issued forth immaculate became, after the first couple of downs, almost indistinguishable hunks of mud. Their faces looked like the faces of women having clay packs in a beauty shop. Their once-white legs were African in hue. The letters on the backs of their jerseys were practically obliterated, so that you couldn't tell one from the other.

Every few minutes time had to be called and towels rushed to the scene of action, so that they could wipe the mud out of their eyes. Every down sent several of them sliding on their hips in several directions. The ball was a cake of soap—in slipperiness, not in cleanliness.

But it took more than this to daunt the spirits and dull the enthusiasms of the rooters on both sides of the vast concrete cup. The cheering was loud and long, and especially effective since the walls of the stadium gave it back in a vast tumultuous echo. The bands of both institutions, Tech's in their Scottish kilts and Pitt's in dignified blue and gold uniforms were there in full force. The usual song-battle between the two cheering sections took place between the halves, and rockets were sent off at the same time by a band of collegians dressed in black hoods, so that they resembled members of the Ku Klux dipped in ink. There is a cemetery on a hill back of the Pitt stadium, and just as the largest and noisiest rocket went off a funeral procession passed on its way there. From where I sat, in the front row, the cars in the procession seemed to be rolling along on the top rim of the stadium. A wierd effect. It quite ruined my afternoon.

There was great consternation among Carnegie fans all around me because Bastian and Sebastian of the Tech team would both be out of the lineup. I know so little about the local gridiron talent that I thought they meant a man named Bastian and C. Bastian, his brother, and even gave a melancholy sigh for Mrs. Bastian, with both her boys laid up. (The above will illustrate plainly why they don't let women sit in the press box, nor put their stories on the sporting pages.)

The fact remains that neither youth was in the game until the very last, when Sebastian went in. For the most part, yes we had no Bastians. Se or otherwise.

The last half was enlivened by Gustafson's touchdown, and by a red faced worthy two seats away from me who arose in the midst of an exciting moment and sang a solo lauding the glories of West Virginia, very solemnly and, I think you'll agree somewhat inappropriately. When it was explained to him in no uncertain terms that he was in error he apologized to the crowd and subsided. Except for these two happy moments the last half was a monotony of runners who ran wide but not long, and kicks that went high but not long, and mud, and chills.

Summing up, I should say it was a good day for the Panthers and a perfectly elegant day for ducks.

Bank notes are so scarce in Educacor that business may have to be curtailed.

LAUGHLIN WINS 3 TO 1 DECISION

Retain League Lead by Beating New Brighton.

On a wet and scoggy field that made good football almost impossible, the Homer Laughlin soccer club won a 3 to 1 decision over the New Brighton eleven Saturday afternoon at New Brighton.

Several changes were noticeable in the Laughlin lineup. Shaw performed at outside right in place of Bower, on the injured list, and Brown took Foster's left half. The New Brighton eleven played an aggressive game but was unable to make its kicks count. From a good pass by Haugh, Shaw missed a goal by inches in the opening half.

The second half saw play largely in New Brighton territory. Carnie proved a good mud plower, his speed enabling him to get away for the first goal. Five miutes later Strutt, of New Brighton, tied the count. Haugh made it to for Laughlin on a pass from Aldridge. After a good pass from Plant, Carnie registered the third counter for the locals.

ENGLISH PUNCHES LINE FOR SOLE TOUCHDOWN IN FIRST PERIOD OF GAME

Leader of Ceramic City Eleven, Starting in Midfield, Penetrates Lisbon Line for 50 yards in Two Plays; Final East Liverpool Offensive Puts Ball Within Feet of Enemy Goal as Whistle Ends Battle.

Pitted against a light put practically veteran Lisbon high school squad, battling in its own back yard, Coach O. V. Boone's Blue and White gridders Saturday began their Columbiana county championship campaign by defeating their county seat rivals, 6 to 0.

The affair developed into something of a duel between Captain Paul English of the Ceramic City combine and Willie Cornelli, the flash little leader of the Lisbon contingent.

As expected, Lisbon proved a tough nut to crack. They had speed, a fair defense and a strong determination to win. It was a fight from the monent the East Liverpool eleven scored its first and only touchdown until the final whistle.

The home eleven chose to take the offensive at the outset of the engagement.

Liverpool kicked to Lisbon after some scrimmage around the center of the fiedd Liverpool took the ball. English then crashed the center of the line for a twenty-yard gain. On the next down he hit the same place fro another thirty yards and a touchdown. Paul English can be credited with the first touchdown scored against Lisbon by an outside team this year. Try for the point failed.

Lisbon chose to kick. English returned the punt to Cornelli who was stopped. Lisbon attempted to punt but both sides were offside. They tried it again and Lisbon kicked out of bounds. The first quarter ended with East Liverpool six points ahead.

Liverpool gained on a pass, English to Perry. Lisbon took the ball on a punt and Hum kicked to English who made a nice return of it. He was injured in the play and time out was called. Lisbon took the ball on punt and Hum again kicked to English. English kicked to Cornelli who made a twenty-yard return. Hum kicked to English who fumbled but a Liverpool player recovered. Liverpool kicked to Cornelli, and Hum returned it.

This quarter had plenty of kick in it. English's next try was blocked and Lisbon recovered. Hum punted to McVeigh. English made a 20 yard gain around right end. English punted and the half ended.

The third and fourth periods were devoid of features save Cornelli's 50-yard run which brought up behind the East Liverpool goal posts, but, however, went for naught because Cornelli had neglected to stay on the playing field.

Within the last few minutes the East Liverpool backs began to beat down the Lisbon defensive and were within a few feet of the goal when the clash ended.

Lisbon was handicapped by the muddy condition of the field, preventing the use of their fast end runs and forward passes. Boone's aggregation lacked the services of three or four regulars.

MICHIGAN IS SETTING PACE

Can Claim Better Record Than Penn Eleven.

By George Barry.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Although Pennsylvania has gone to the front in national esteem as a result of successive victories over Yale and Chicago, three other teams today could claim better records than the Red and Blue, at least as far as actual figures were concerned. They were Michigan, Syracuse and Cornell, none of which have had a point scored against them.

Michigan, playing a harder early season schedule than the other two, probably deserves as high a ranking as any, the Wolverines having met Michigan Aggies, Indiana, Wisconsin and Illinois without having their goal line or goal posts crossed. Meanwhile, Michigan has run up a total of 128 points to 158 for Syracuse and 195 for Cornell.

The latter, however, has been playing a series of warm-up games and will not get a real test until it meets Dartmouth, one of many undefeated teams.

Some of the others are Pennsylvania, a national pace-go-getter; Alabama, Washington, which boasts the high total of 208 points; Iowa, the Army and W. and J.

Colgate, the Navy and Missouri also remain undefeated. But have played tie games. So, for that matter, has Washington, the Coast leader.

Among the more or less small timers of eastern football, Boston college and New York university stand out. They haven't been beaten yet, although the class of their opposition could have been improved.

Saturday's scores ran pretty generally to form but were not without their surprises, particularly in the south. There, Georgia Tech, rated as having its best team of recent years, was beaten by Alabama, which jumped into prominence as a result. Georgia's rather top heavy defeat of Vanderbilt also came as a shock to national followers of football.

Dartmouth's defeat of Harvard was not unexpected but the size of the score, 32 to 9, lacked general anticipation. It indicated that Dartmouth has a very good team or Harvard a very poor one. Yale came back against Brown, as did California and Stanford in the Coast Conference and Nebraska in the Missouri valley group. Yet none of the three latter were able to take the league leadership, Washington holding the pace on the coast and Missouri and Ames in the Valley Conference.

Incidentally, the defeat of Harvard and Princeton on the same day left little prestige for the east's big three.

The middle west's scores were notable for three things. Iowa and Michigan kept their slates clean at the expense of Ohio State and Illinois, while Notre Dame, annihilated by the Army, came back against Minnesota.

Several intersectional games were played but outside of the Penn-Chicago contest, they were of little consequence, merely serving to increase the east's lead. Not only did Pennsylvania win but the Army disposed of St. Louis, Penn State defeated Michigan Aggies and Fordham scored over Akron. The west then finished a poor afternoon of it when Northwestern lost to Tulane.

Rayon, or artificial silk, manufacture has grown to such proportions that formation of a rayon trade association is being discussed in Great Britain.

MICHIGAN IS SETTING PACE

By George Barry.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Although Pennsylvania has gone to the front in national esteem as a result of successive victories over Yale and Chicago, three other teams today could claim better records than the Red and Blue, at least as far as actual figures were concerned. They were Michigan, Syracuse and Cornell, none of which have had a point scored against them.

Michigan, playing a harder early season schedule than the other two, probably deserves as high a ranking as any, the Wolverines having met Michigan Aggies, Indiana, Wisconsin and Illinois without having their goal line or goal posts crossed. Meanwhile, Michigan has run up a total of 126 points to 158 for Syracuse and 195 for Cornell.

The latter, however, has been playing a series of warm-up games and will not get a real test until it meets Dartmouth, one of many undefeated teams.

Some of the others are Pennsylvania, a national pace-go-getter; Alabama, Washington, which boasts the high total of 208 points; Iowa, the Army and W. and J.

Colgate, the Navy and Missouri also remain undefeated. But have played tie games. So, for that matter, has Washington, the Coast leader.

Among the more or less small timers of eastern football, Boston college and New York university stand out. They haven't been beaten yet, although the class of their opposition could have been improved.

Saturday's scores ran pretty generally to form but were not without their surprises, particularly in the south. There, Georgia Tech, rated as having its best team of recent years, was beaten by Alabama, which jumped into prominence as a result. Georgia's rather top heavy defeat of Vanderbilt also came as a shock to national followers of football.

Dartmouth's defeat of Harvard was not unexpected but the size of the score, 32 to 9, lacked general anticipation. It indicated that Dartmouth has a very good team or Harvard a very poor one. Yale came back against Brown, as did California and Stanford in the Coast Conference and Nebraska in the Missouri valley group. Yet none of the three latter were able to take the league leadership, Washington holding the pace on the coast and Missouri and Ames in the Valley Conference.

Incidentally, the defeat of Harvard and Princeton on the same day left little prestige for the east's big three.

The middle west's scores were notable for three things. Iowa and Michigan kept their slates clean at the expense of Ohio State and Illinois, while Notre Dame, annihilated by the Army, came back against Minnesota.

Several intersectional games were played but outside of the Penn-Chicago contest, they were of little consequence, merely serving to increase the east's lead. Not only did Pennsylvania win but the Army disposed of St. Louis, Penn State defeated Michigan Aggies and Fordham scored over Akron. The west then finished a poor afternoon of it when Northwestern lost to Tulane.

Rayon, or artificial silk, manufacture has grown to such proportions that formation of a rayon trade association is being discussed in Great Britain.

Peace at Last.
Let Us Hope So.
Why Is Wall Street Crazy?
The Prince Comes Home.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

An event, more important historically than the great war, is the agreement of Europe's leading nations to arbitrate instead of fighting. France and Germany, most important in the agreement, because most apt to fight, show an earnest desire to keep the peace and start building from now on.

President Coolidge attaches great importance to the Locarno treaties, believing they will have a permanently peaceful effect.

If the white races have decided to stop murdering each other, it is certainly good news.

The suggestion from Washington is that we should now call an international parley here to discuss limitation of armaments, regulating size of armies, etc.

Why not let Europe continue to work out her own salvation? Because we kept out of the league of nations, Coolidge making it clear that we would not finance new wars, Europe begins to act sensibly. Why must we mix in?

As to the size of armies, big business in this country wants an army of certain size, not for war but for strikes or other industrial troubles. Big business finding itself face to face with a well organized labor army is determined to have at command a national army big enough for safety and would not accept less.

This country is making itself useful keeping peace on this continent. Wars between South American republics have practically ceased, arbitration by Uncle Sam being accepted in important cases. Why not try to be useful here, on our western half of the world, and let who will be clever in Europe?

An eloquent Negro preacher at the Stockholm church conference spoke of the five great races of men as "the five fingers on the hand of God."

If we can attend to our mixed race here and be useful and decent from Patagonia to the Arctic circle we may well allow Providence to look after the four other "fingers."

High finance wants to know what is going on back of the stock exchange frenzy that led to a sale of 2,684,907 shares of stock in one day. Two stocks alone, General Motors and U. S. Steel, sold more than 350,000 shares.

Such runaway stock markets worry the "best minds" for if a smash comes they must pick up the pieces. They like to move conservatively, making money every day with the reins in their hands. When the public seizes the reins and the runaway starts, high finance worries. It has put up the price of gambling funds called "call

BRIAND WARNS FINANCE CHIEF

Nationalist Ministers in German President's Official Family Surrender Their Portfolios.

PARIS, Oct. 26.—Demands for the resignation of M. Joseph Caillaux, French finance minister, were made during a stormy session of the cabinet today.

Caillaux, who steadfastly refuses to Caillaux, who also refuses to accommodate his financial policy to the demands of the radicals, was under a heavy fire during the brief cabinet session.

"If you don't resign we will hand in the entire cabinet's resignation," M. Briand, foreign minister, declared to Caillaux.

Caillaux Is Defiant.

Premier Painleve is said to have also urged upon M. Cailliaux that he resign in order that the remainder of the cabinet could carry on its work. His request was backed not only by M. Briand but also by Minister of Public Works Laval.

Premier Painleve was caustic in his criticism of Caillaux before the cabinet and laid particular stress upon Caillaux's defiant speech yesterday when he denounced the capital levy and said he would make no concessions to the demands of the chamber majority.

Caillaux stood pat. With his eyes flashing and his voice raised to a pitch which made it audible outside the cabinet chamber, he replied:

"I understand perfectly what you desire. You want me to resign so that

The school head points out that the proposal will not increase school taxes, but means merely a renewal of the levy which has been in effect for the last five years and which expires this year. This country succeeding itself at keeping peace on this continent. Wars between South American republics have practically ceased, arbitration by Uncle Sam being accepted in important cases. Why not try to be useful here, on our western half of the world, and let who will be clever in Europe?

An eloquent Negro preacher at the Stockholm church conference spoke of the five great races of men as "the five fingers on the hand of God."

If we can attend to our mixed race here and be useful and decent from Patagonia to the Arctic circle we may well allow Providence to look after the four other "fingers."

High finance wants to know what is going on back of the stock exchange frenzy that led to a sale of 2,684,907 shares of stock in one day. Two stocks alone, General Motors and U. S. Steel, sold more than 350,000 shares.

Such runaway stock markets worry the "best minds" for if a smash comes they must pick up the pieces. They like to move conservatively, making money every day with the reins in their hands. When the public seizes the reins and the runaway starts, high finance worries. It has put up the price of gambling funds called "call

FRENCH PREMIER ASKED TO QUIT; HINDENBURG FACES CABINET CRISIS

Caillaux is Under Heavy Fire as he Refuses to Heed Colleague's Demands for Resignation.

BRIAND WARNS FINANCE CHIEF

Nationalist Ministers in German President's Official Family Surrender Their Portfolios.

PARIS, Oct. 26.—Demands for the resignation of M. Joseph Caillaux, French finance minister, were made during a stormy session of the cabinet today.

Caillaux, who steadfastly refuses to Caillaux, who also refuses to accommodate his financial policy to the demands of the radicals, was under a heavy fire during the brief cabinet session.

"If you don't resign we will hand in the entire cabinet's resignation," M. Briand, foreign minister, declared to Caillaux.

Caillaux Is Defiant.

Premier Painleve is said to have also urged upon M. Caillaux that he resign in order that the remainder of the cabinet could carry on its work. His request was backed not only by M. Briand but also by Minister of Public Works Laval.

Premier Painleve was caustic in his criticism of Caillaux before the cabinet and laid particular stress upon Caillaux's defiant speech yesterday when he denounced the capital levy and said he would make no concessions to the demands of the chamber majority.

Caillaux stood pat. With his eyes flashing and his voice raised to a pitch which made it audible outside the cabinet chamber, he replied:

"I understand perfectly what you desire. You want me to resign so that

Earl Waggle, 38, automobile mechanic, 1157 Pennsylvania avenue, was recovering in the City hospital today from injuries sustained at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon when struck on the back of the head by a nine-foot piece of lumber which he was hauling in an automobile.

Waggle was enroute to his home on Pennsylvania avenue from the Kerr Lumber yards, Virginia avenue, with the two pieces of two-by-four placed crossways in his car. At the corner of Boyce street and Pennsylvania avenue, he swerved his machine close to the curb to allow a street car to pass. One end of the heavy piece of timber struck a telephone pole, causing the other end to swing around and strike him on the back of the head, just below the base of the skull.

A Pennsylvania motorist, who was passing, placed Waggle in his car and started for the office of Dr. F. F. Davis, Mulberry street. Davis ordered Waggle's removal to the hospital.

An X-ray examination of Waggle's injuries by Dr. C. H. Bailey failed to disclose any fractures, although it was announced today that Waggle was suffering from a serious bruise on the back of his neck. He was unconscious for several hours after the accident.

Joy Exacts Life As Man, Blind for Years, Sees Again

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 26.—"I can see again," cried Frederick Clark, 27 years old, of Bridgeburg, Ont., when bandages were removed from his eyes after an operation ending 20 years of darkness.

For a few hours he reveled in rediscovery of a world of daylight. Then he died.

Physicians today declared joy killed this man who, friends say, never had weakened under sorrow and suffering. When a lad of 17, Clark went blind, his vision destroyed by overstudy. Through the long black years, he never gave up hope, persistingly asserting "some day I shall see again."

Firm's legs were severed by the impact.

The two men were removed to the Gill hospital, Steubenville, where Firm died at 10 o'clock Sunday morning. Custer, who sustained a concussion of the brain and internal injuries, will recover.

FIVE-MONTH SCHOOL TERM LOOMS IF ELECTORS REFUSE

Warning is Given by Supt. McVay in Appeal For Additional Revenue to Maintain Efficiency.

Failure of the voters to approve the three-mill school levy at the election on Tuesday, November 3, will mean that "our schools cannot remain in session for more than five months this year."

This is the warning sounded by Superintendent of Schools Charles C. McVay today in appealing to the voters to support the levy when they go to the polls.

The school head points out that the proposal will not increase school taxes, but means merely a renewal of the levy which has been in effect for the last five years and which expires this year. Not only will the school term be shortened but the rating of the high school will be lowered so that graduates will be compelled to undergo an

Costs Ollie Harvey $50 to Talk Back To Mayor Brown

Harvey was arrested in his home in Second street by Captain Conley, Patrolman Haley and Turnkey Cline at 2:30 o'clock this morning while "entertaining" a party of friends, according to the police.

"I'll fine you $100 and costs," said the mayor.

Then Harvey became abusive.

"That'll cost you $50 more and if you don't shut up I'll raise the ante on you again," replied the mayor. The prisoner said no more. His fine was paid by a woman friend.

Police say that Harvey threatened to "get" Captain Conley after the raid.

The coast guard cutter Acushnet and the New London wrecking tug Commissioner put out to the Commonwealth's assistance.

Latest reports by radio stated that the Acushnet and the Commissioner had the Commonwealth in tow for Newport—that all on board were safe.

Captain Calls For Aid

The gale, which damaged the Commonwealth's port paddle wheel and buckets, was the same that swept New England with hurricane force, wrecking buildings, killing one man and injuring six others in Woburn, Mass.

The Commonwealth, which sailed from Fall River and Newport last evening, had weathered the gale until midday between the arm of Point Judith and the Watch Hill shore. At this point the shell was so rocked by the hurricane wind that her port paddle wheel and buckets were torn away, rendering her helpless. Anchors were dropped and calls were money," but that did NOT check the runaway.

One or two trips across the continent with frequent stops would make the boom seem less mysterious to those amazed by it. The nation is loaded down with wealth and the whole world keeps on shipping in more.

There are at least ten thousand separate local booms in addition to the general national boom.

The surprising thing is that the whole boom movement has been so steady and moderate. Suppose there were to start a genuine real estate boom, for instance, in Chicago or New York. If Miami, with 80,000 population, can sell city land at $25,000 a front foot, what would be the boom price in New York, a city with a population that increases each year about three and a half times the total population of Miami?

Also Americans are earning twice what they earned before the war and they are spending or investing their earnings.

There is nothing in being a bear just now.

The prince of Wales returns home from a long journey as "imperial advance agent" in South and West Africa and South America. His "firm" sends him out in fine style on a battleship with no close questioning of expense accounts and the young traveling man is worth what he costs.

The Spectator, a Tory weekly, most respectful in its attitude toward royalty, wants to know why the prince does not now "attach himself to some public cause."

It's a foolish question. An heir apparent to the throne must not take sides in any important national question. He must be all things to all parties, not knowing whether a coal miner or a duke will be prime minister and write his first speech from the throne, when he becomes king.

Besides the British empire is a vast business and what every business needs in this day is a good advertising man and a good salesman.

The Prince of Wales is both.

The British dirigible R-33 rose 3,000 feet in the air, carrying suspended below it a monoplane attached to a "trapeze." The monoplane was released, flew around in the air for half an hour, long enough to go to a nearby city, drop bombs and return. Then it hooked on to the dirigible again, traveled with that for a while and was released once more.

In England they know how to manage dirigibles and heavier than air machines. Perhaps their national flying force is managed by men that understand flying. That would help, it might be tried here.

The richest country in the world ought to pay federal judges decent salaries instead of the present miserable pay.

It is suggested that the minimum salary be $10,000 a year, but that is inadequate. If a judge was worth $7,500 a year some years ago he is certainly worth $15,000 a year now. The people do not protect themselves when they cheat their judges through inadequate pay.

Woman is Slain In Fit of Jealousy By One of Her Sex

BOSTON, Oct. 26.—During a jealous rage, Mrs. Rosa Condia, 26, shot and killed Mrs. Rose. Trosi, 32, in a market in East Boston today. As Mrs. Trosi dropped dead, Mrs. Condi fled.

According to police, Salvatore Trosi, husband of the slain woman, had been paying attention to Mrs. Condia.

The women engaged in a heated argument just prior to the shooting.

TOLEDO MOTORIST IS ASPHYXIATED

PEACEFUL EUROPEAN HORIZON FADES; DIPLOMATIC SKIES DULL

One week ago Europe hailed prospects of permanent peace as the drafters of the Locarno security pacts returned to their home capitals. Today Europe has war clouds in the Balkans and the prospects of the Locarno pacts being at least delayed in ratification if not entirely rejected.

Political events have moved rapidly.

Nationalist cabinet ministers have handed in their resignations to President Hindenburg of Germany. This maneuver may force an election, putting ratification of the Locarno pact up to the German people.

Finance Minister Caillaux, whose financial proposals are unsatisfactory to the French chamber majority, refuses to resign and threatens to cause the downfall of the Painleve cabinet, possibly complicating French ratification of the Locarno pacts.

Greece and Bulgaria are summoned before the league of nations council today on charges of violating the league of nations covenant. Unless the league can assert its authority over these two nations and restore peace, the prestige of the league will be greatly injured and Germany's entrance into the league may be prohibited by public opinion.

Russia has flatly rejected a suggestion by Premier Baldwin that the soviets might now desire to enter the league.

The peaceful European horizon of a week ago has faded, and diplomatic skies are dull and gloomy.

FIVE KILLED IN NEW YORK

Thirty Aboard Coal Barges Rescued by Cutters.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Heavy property damage and the loss of at least five lives in and around New York City was caused by the terrific gale that swept the Atlantic seaboard yesterday, according to reports received today.

Thirty men, women and children aboard 20 coal barges being towed from Raritan bay to New York were rescued by Coast Guard cutters and police boats as they were being blown to sea. The gale had torn them loose from the tugs towing them.

An expectant mother and her unborn child, two fishermen, another man and a six-year-old girl perished in this vicinity. Mrs. Lucille Day was killed when the wind whipped a clothes line she was hanging out of her hand as she leaned from a fifth story window. She fell to the courtyard below. Doctors operated in an attempt to save her child but it died also.

Frank Doebell nad William C. Hambler, of Brooklyn, Fishermen, drowned when the storm overturned their boat. Three others with them were rescued.

Six-year-old Della Porter of Little Falls, N. J., was killed when the wind blew down the walls of an old laundry near where she was playing.

John Namm of this city was asphyxiated when wind blew out a burning gas jet in the room in which he was sleeping.

sent for aid by Captain R. J. Roberts.

Captain Roberts had found it impossible to make repairs at sea and he could not continue.

At first fear for the safety of the passengers was expressed and plans were made to transfer them to rescue ships. But the wind subsided somewhat and the transfer was found unnecessary.

Put Passengers Ashore.

At Newport passengers will be put ashore and those who desire may continue to New York by special train.

Officers of the Commonwealth said by radio they were uncertain whether the contact with the heavy roll of the sea or contact with some floating wreckage caused the loss of the port paddle wheel and buckets.

Messages telling of the plight of the Commonwealth were picked up by the Independent Radio company at New London, Conn., and relayed to Warren T. Berry, superintendent of the line operating the Commonwealth.

The first message from Captain Roberts said: "Broke bucket and port paddle wheel. Obliged to anchor."

The next message said:

"Damage too extensive for repairs where we are; will have to be towed to Newport."

Coast Guard Goes to Rescue.

A telephone message was put through to the coast guard station at Woods Hole and almost in less time than it takes to write it the coast guardsmen aboard the Acushnet were tumbling out of their bunks and the cutter was leaving her wharf for the run south.

The run of the Acushnet from the coast to the strcen liner was a memorable one for those aboard. The wind was tearing down the coast line at a 60-mile clip. The little Acushnet put her nose into the swell and like a greyhound of the sea reached her objective.

Meanwhile, the Merritt-Chapman Scott coporation's tug Commissioner put out from New London but her run was a shorter one than the Acushnet.

Both the Acushnet and the Commissioner carried orders to "stand by to take of passengers and offer tow if needed."

"Graveyard of Coast."

However, when the two vessels reached the side of the rolling Commonwealth they found that the liner was weathering the storm and that a tow was what was needed.

Ropes and tow lines were placed between the Acushnet, Commissioner and the Commonwealth and the trip back to Newport was soon under way.

The spot where the Commonwealth was disabled is known among mariners as "the graveyard of the Rhode Island coast." It was here that the steamship Larchmont—a Providence to New York liner—went down with a loss of 130 souls. Other smaller ships have met a similar fate in the runway between the Rhode Island shore and Block Island. It was off Block Island that the submarine S-51 was rammed and sunk with a loss of 33 lives.

Man Shot During Card Game.

Alabama Hit

The damage done was largely to small communities and outlying farms.

The heaviest loss of life was in the territory surrounding Troy, in Pike county, where the twister first descended. After blowing in from Crenshaw county. From the Troy vicinity, it ranged eastward into Barbour and northward into Bullock county, where it spent its force.

The dead included four members of the family of Walter Knight, near Troy, whose house was demolished by the wind. Four of the Knight children were reported instantly killed, and two others injured. Knight and his wife were reported probably fatally injured.

The storm left a trail of wreckage in its wake. Houses, fences and outbuildings were blown to splinters, trees uprooted and a terrific downpour of rain followed immediately behind the wind. This and a severe electrical storm hampered rescue operations and prevented an accurate check of the death toll for hours.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Financial assistance for the sufferers in Alabama's tornado zone was offered today by the American Red Cross.

George Grane, the Mobile representative of the Red Cross, was instructed to proceed to the devastated area, take charge of relief work and render necessary assistance.

you may form another cabinet without me.

"I refuse.

"I will go before the chamber with the entire cabine and fall with it and not alone."

Entire Cabinet May Fall.

After this dramatic stand by Caillaux the cabinet adjourned until tomorrow, in an effort to patch up the situation. Public opinion seems to agree with Caillaux's prediction that the entire cabinet and fall with it and goes before the chamber.

An official communique strives to make it appear that all is well. It states that Caillaux read his financial project to the cabinet, but had only one copy and therefore it was impossible for a general discussion. The official statement says that cabinet members will be furnished with copies of Caillaux's projects this afternoon and will have an opportunity to study them before tomorrow's meeting.

Luther Cabinet Will Not Quit.

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—The Luther cabinet will not resign, as the result of the resignation of three Nationalist members.

The cabinet, described as a "rump cabinet," will continue in office, filling the three vacent porfolios with the respective secretaries to the departing ministers.

Nationalist ministers handed their resignations to President Hindenburg.

Dr. Schiele, minister of the interior; Herr Von Schlieben, minister of finance, and Herr Neuhaus, minister of commerce, are out. The Nationalist opposition to the Locarno agreements proved more than a gesture made as a play to the Nationalist galleries.

President Von Hindenburg, the old war-horse of the Nationalists, thus finds himself deserted by leaders of the party which swept him into the presidency.

ATHENS, Oct. 26.—Greece and Bulgaria have agreed to withdraw their troops from each other's territory, it was announced tonight.

The agreement for the return of the troops to the confines of their own frontiers was reached after Rumania had made representations.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Reports of renewed fighting on the Greco-Bulgarian frontier reached London today at the same time that Foreign Secretary Chamberlain prepared to set out for Paris, where the council of the league of nations will attempt to settle the trouble.

The Greek legation today issued another denial that Greek attacks upon the Bulgars had been renewed. The legation stated that orders have been given to the troops to withdraw to their original positions as soon as Greek soil is clear of Bulgarians. It was also denied by the legation that Bulgarian porsoners had been executed, the few prisoners taken having been sent to Salonika, it was said.

Slays Aged Farmer, Shoots Two Women And Kills Self

STURBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 26.—The murder of a 63-year-old farmer, the shooting of the farmer's housekeeper and her daughter, and an all-night vigil at the side of the dead and wounded was revealed today when John Brown, 47, driver of the town's school bus, took his own life.

Brown had shot and instantly killed Eugene Holden, 63, had put three bullets into the body of Mrs. Mary Tiffany, 43, Holden's housekeeper, had shot Miss Jessie Tiffany three times in the hand, had missed killing her when a hairpin deflected a bullet intended for her head and had stood guard in the Holden home all night.

STORM WRECKS 17 AIRPLANES

Machines Torn From Moorings Along Chesapeake Beach.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Salvage operations were got under way today to save as much as possible out of the wreckage of seventeen of the navy's newest seaplanes, strung out along several miles of beach near Sollers' Point on the Chesapeake.

A 60-mile gale tore the planes loose from their moorings Sunday and tossed them on the beach, twisted, torn and broken.

At least six of the planes were totally wrecked, and of the other eleven naval officials today were hopeful that the motors and less fragile portions could be recovered.

Meanwhile, an inquiry was ordered from the navy department to ascertain if there had been negligence or "bungling" in this latest peace-time catastrophe to the navy, which wiped out nearly the entire sea-plane contingent of the Atlantic coast.

The wrecked planes were part of the Flotilla of 23 that were sent to Baltimore for maneuvers in connection with the Schneider cup races. They comprised two complete squadrons, under command of Commander T. G. Ellyson.

Of the half dozen ships unhurt, several were saved by their pilots leaping into the cockpits and steering them off-shore to ride out the gale.

The blow was a severe one to the naval air service, as the wrecked planes constituted the newest and best ships in the service. They were torpedo and scouting planes of late construction, and only a half dozen survive in the entire service aside from those sent to Baltimore.

They cost $25,000 each without motors, which will make the monetary oss in the disaster run to considerable figure.

Navy officials were gloomy today over this latest peace-time disaster—coming at a time when the navy already is under fire for numerous mishaps, and defending itself against charges of "bungling amateurism" and "inefficiency" made by Col. William Mitchell.

examination before entering colleges, it is declared.

In order to create interest in the proposed levy, school children in the district have been asked to write an essay, dealing with the proposal. Pupils, also have been asked to give six reasons why the levy should be adopted.

Fifteen thousand sample ballots have been printed. Each school child is to be given two of these ballots to be taken to his home. Arrangements also have been made to have the ballots distributed in homes which have no children in school.

Here is Superintendent McVay's appeal to the voters:

"Five years ago, the people of East Liverpool were called upon to vote a three-mill levy for a period of five years in order that our schools might continue in session for nine months each year.

"This levy was passed at that time and the schools of East Liverpool were placed on the same basis as other schools throughout the state, indicating that the voters of East Liverpool were interested in their boys and girls.

"Now, this same question comes up again this year in renewing this levy for another period of five years. This levy is not only asked for in East Liverpool schools but it will be voted upon in 16 other districts in Columbiana county.

This levy will not increase your taxes, as it is only asking for the renewal for another period of five years. This levy alone will bring in for school purpose more than one-third of all the revenue for school purposes.

"If this levy fails to pass, our schools cannot remain in session for more than five months this school year, and our children will not be given an equal opportunity with other children throughout the state. Our high school would lose its standing and graduates would not be admitted to any college without examination.

"Its defeat will mean that East Liverpool is willing to occupy an inferior place in school ranking; it will mean we have failed to retain our place among progressive cities of Ohio.

"Can we as citizens of East Liverpool fail not to renew this levy for another period of five years?"

Abray was a boarder. Gray had been engaged in a building job at McKeesport and as soon as he entered his house he opened fire, police said.

DRIVER FINED AFTER CRASH

W. W. Twitty, Akron, Assessed $50 in Police Court.

W. W. Twitty, Akron, paid two fines totaling $50, to Mayor Brown Sunday night, as the result of an automobile collision near the "Red steps" on Pennsylvania avenue.

Twitty, driving a Ford coupe, with two companions, is alleged to have been traveling west when he struck a Chevrolet coupe, driven by J. M. Scott, South Market street, who was headed toward East End. The front ends of both cars were badly damaged in the crash.

Captain Conley and Patrolman Roth arrested Twitty upon a charge of reckless driving. At the city hall it was discovered that his car was carrying license plates which had been issued for another car. He was assessed $25 and costs on the reckless driving charge and $20 and costs on the charge of using the wrong license plates. The fines were paid.

Both machines, which were disabled in the crash, were removed to the McElravy Brothers garage, Market street.

money," but that did NOT check the runaway.

One or two trips across the continent with frequent stops would make the boom seem less mysterious to those amazed by it. The nation is loaded down with wealth and the whole world keeps on shipping in more.

There are at least ten thousand separate local booms in addition to the general national boom.

The surprising thing is that the whole boom movement has been so steady and moderate. Suppose there were to start a genuine real estate boom, for instance, in Chicago or New York. If Miami, with 80,000 population, can sell city land at $25,000 a front foot, what would be the boom price in New York, a city with a population that increases each year about three and a half times the total population of Miami?

Also Americans are earning twice what they earned before the war and they are spending or investing their earnings.

There is nothing in being a bear just now.

The prince of Wales returns home from a long journey as "imperial advance agent" in South and West Africa and South America. His "firm" sends him out in fine style on a battleship with no close questioning of expense accounts and the young traveling man is worth what he costs.

The Spectator, a Tory weekly, most respectful in its attitude toward royalty, wants to know why the prince does not now "attach himself to some public cause."

It's a foolish question. An heir apparent to the throne must not take sides in any important national question. He must be all things to all parties, not knowing whether a coal miner or a duke will be prime minister and write his first speech from the throne, when he becomes king.

Besides the British empire is a vast business and what every business needs in this day is a good advertising man and a good salesman.

The Prince of Wales is both.

The British dirigible R-33 rose 3,000 feet in the air, carrying suspended below it a monoplane attached to a "trapeze." The monoplane was released, flew around in the air for half an hour, long enough to go to a nearby city, drop bombs and return. Then it hooked on to the dirigible again, traveled with that for a while and was released once more.

In England they know how to manage dirigibles and heavier than air machines. Perhaps their national flying force is managed by men that understand flying. That would help, it might be tried here.

The richest country in the world ought to pay federal judges decent salaries instead of the present miserable pay.

It is suggested that the minimum salary be $10,000 a year, but that is inadequate. If a judge was worth $7,500 a year some years ago he is certainly worth $15,000 a year now. The people do not protect themselves when they cheat their judges through inadequate pay.

Woman is Slain In Fit of Jealousy By One of Her Sex

BOSTON, Oct. 26.—During a jealous rage, Mrs. Rosa Condia, 26, shot and killed Mrs. Rose. Trosi, 32, in a market in East Boston today. As Mrs. Trosi dropped dead, Mrs. Condi fled.

According to police, Salvatore Trosi, husband of the slain woman, had been paying attention to Mrs. Condia.

The women engaged in a heated argument just prior to the shooting.

PEACEFUL EUROPEAN HORIZON FADES; DIPLOMATIC SKIES DULL

One week ago Europe hailed prospects of permanent peace as the drafters of the Locarno security pacts returned to their home capitals. Today Europe has war clouds in the Balkans and the prospects of the Locarno pacts being at least delayed in ratification if not entirely rejected.

Political events have moved rapidly.

Nationalist cabinet ministers have handed in their resignations to President Hindenburg of Germany. This maneuver may force an election, putting ratification of the Locarno pact up to the German people.

Finance Minister Caillaux, whose financial proposals are unsatisfactory to the French chamber majority, refuses to resign and threatens to cause the downfall of the Painleve cabinet, possibly complicating French ratification of the Locarno pacts.

Greece and Bulgaria are summoned before the league of nations council today on charges of violating the league of nations covenant. Unless the league can assert its authority over these two nations and restore peace, the prestige of the league will be greatly injured and Germany's entrance into the league may be prohibited by public opinion.

Russia has flatly rejected a suggestion by Premier Baldwin that the soviets might now desire to enter the league.

The peaceful European horizon of a week ago has faded, and diplomatic skies are dull and gloomy.

FIVE KILLED IN NEW YORK

Thirty Aboard Coal Barges Rescued by Cutters.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Heavy property damage and the loss of at least five lives in and around New York City was caused by the terrific gale that swept the Atlantic seaboard yesterday, according to reports received today.

Thirty men, women and children aboard 20 coal barges being towed from Raritan bay to New York were rescued by Coast Guard cutters and police boats as they were being blown to sea. The gale had torn them loose from the tugs towing them.

An expectant mother and her unborn child, two fishermen, another man and a six-year-old girl perished in this vicinity. Mrs. Lucille Day was killed when the wind whipped a clothes line she was hanging out of her hand as she leaned from a fifth story window. She fell to the courtyard below. Doctors operated in an attempt to save her child but it died also.

Frank Doebell nad William C. Hambler, of Brooklyn, Fishermen, drowned when the storm overturned their boat. Three others with them were rescued.

Six-year-old Della Porter of Little Falls, N. J., was killed when the wind blew down the walls of an old laundry near where she was playing.

John Namm of this city was asphyxiated when wind blew out a burning gas jet in the room in which he was sleeping.

sent for aid by Captain R. J. Roberts.

Captain Roberts had found it impossible to make repairs at sea and he could not continue.

At first fear for the safety of the passengers was expressed and plans were made to transfer them to rescue ships. But the wind subsided somewhat and the transfer was found unnecessary.

Put Passengers Ashore.

At Newport passengers will be put ashore and those who desire may continue to New York by special train.

Officers of the Commonwealth said by radio they were uncertain whether the contact with the heavy roll of the sea or contact with some floating wreckage caused the loss of the port paddle wheel and buckets.

Messages telling of the plight of the Commonwealth were picked up by the Independent Radio company at New London, Conn., and relayed to Warren T. Berry, superintendent of the line operating the Commonwealth.

The first message from Captain Roberts said: "Broke bucket and port paddle wheel. Obliged to anchor."

The next message said:

"Damage too extensive for repairs where we are; will have to be towed to Newport."

Coast Guard Goes to Rescue.

A telephone message was put through to the coast guard station at Woods Hole and almost in less time than it takes to write it the coast guardsmen aboard the Acushnet were tumbling out of their bunks and the cutter was leaving her wharf for the run south.

The run of the Acushnet from the coast to the stricen liner was a memorable one for those aboard. The wind was tearing down the coast line at a 60-mile clip. The little Acushnet put her nose into the swell and like a greyhound of the sea reached her objective.

Meanwhile, the Merritt-Chapman Scott coporation's tug Commissioner put out from New London but her run was a shorter one than the Acushnet.

Both the Acushnet and the Commissioner carried orders to "stand by to take of passengers and offer tow if needed."

"Graveyard of Coast."

However, when the two vessels reached the side of the rolling Commonwealth they found that the liner was weathering the storm and that a tow was what was needed.

Ropes and tow lines were placed between the Acushnet, Commissioner and the Commonwealth and the trip back to Newport was soon under way.

The spot where the Commonwealth was disabled is known among mariners as "the graveyard of the Rhode Island coast." It was here that the steamship Larchmont—a Providence to New York liner—went down with a loss of 130 souls. Other smaller ships have met a similar fate in the runway between the Rhode Island shore and Block Island. It was off Block Island that the submarine S-51 was rammed and sunk with a loss of 33 lives.

Man Shot During Card Game.

Alabama Hit

The damage done was largely to small communities and outlying farms.

The heaviest loss of life was in the territory surrounding Troy, in Pike county, where the twister first descended. After blowing in from Crenshaw county. From the Troy vicinity, it ranged eastward into Barbour and northward into Bullock county, where it spent its force.

The dead included four members of the family of Walter Knight, near Troy, whose house was demolished by the wind. Four of the Knight children were reported instantly killed, and two others injured. Knight and his wife were reported probably fatally injured.

The storm left a trail of wreckage in its wake. Houses, fences and outbuildings were blown to splinters, trees uprooted and a terrific downpour of rain followed immediately behind the wind. This and a severe electrical storm hampered rescue operations and prevented an accurate check of the death toll for hours.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Financial assistance for the sufferers in Alabama's tornado zone was offered today by the American Red Cross.

George Grane, the Mobile representative of the Red Cross, was instructed to proceed to the devastated area, take charge of relief work and render necessary assistance.

you may form another cabinet without me.

"I refuse.

"I will go before the chamber with the entire cabine and fall with it and not alone."

Entire Cabinet May Fall.

After this dramatic stand by Caillaux the cabinet adjourned until tomorrow, in an effort to patch up the situation. Public opinion seems to agree with Caillaux's prediction that the entire cabinet and fall with it and goes before the chamber.

An official communique strives to make it appear that all is well. It states that Caillaux read his financial project to the cabinet, but had only one copy and therefore it was impossible for a general discussion. The official statement says that cabinet members will be furnished with copies of Caillaux's projects this afternoon and will have an opportunity to study them before tomorrow's meeting.

Luther Cabinet Will Not Quit.

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—The Luther cabinet will not resign, as the result of the resignation of three Nationalist members.

The cabinet, described as a "rump cabinet," will continue in office, filling the three vacent porfolios with the respective secretaries to the departing ministers.

Nationalist ministers handed their resignations to President Hindenburg.

Dr. Schiele, minister of the interior; Herr Von Schlieben, minister of finance, and Herr Neuhaus, minister of commerce, are out. The Nationalist opposition to the Locarno agreements proved more than a gesture made as a play to the Nationalist galleries.

President Von Hindenburg, the old war-horse of the Nationalists, thus finds himself deserted by leaders of the party which swept him into the presidency.

ATHENS, Oct. 26.—Greece and Bulgaria have agreed to withdraw their troops from each other's territory, it was announced tonight.

The agreement for the return of the troops to the confines of their own frontiers was reached after Rumania had made representations.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Reports of renewed fighting on the Greco-Bulgarian frontier reached London today at the same time that Foreign Secretary Chamberlain prepared to set out for Paris, where the council of the league of nations will attempt to settle the trouble.

The Greek legation today issued another denial that Greek attacks upon the Bulgars had been renewed. The legation stated that orders have been given to the troops to withdraw to their original positions as soon as Greek soil is clear of Bulgarians. It was also denied by the legation that Bulgarian porsoners had been executed, the few prisoners taken having been sent to Salonika, it was said.

Slays Aged Farmer, Shoots Two Women And Kills Self

STURBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 26.—The murder of a 63-year-old farmer, the shooting of the farmer's housekeeper and her daughter, and an all-night vigil at the side of the dead and wounded was revealed today when John Brown, 47, driver of the town's school bus, took his own life.

Brown had shot and instantly killed Eugene Holden, 63, had put three bullets into the body of Mrs. Mary Tiffany, 43, Holden's housekeeper, had shot Miss Jessie Tiffany three times in the hand, had missed killing her when a hairpin deflected a bullet intended for her head and had stood guard in the Holden home all night.

STORM WRECKS 17 AIRPLANES

Machines Torn From Moorings Along Chesapeake Beach.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Salvage operations were got under way today to save as much as possible out of the wreckage of seventeen of the navy's newest seaplanes, strung out along several miles of beach near Sollers' Point on the Chesapeake.

A 60-mile gale tore the planes loose from their moorings Sunday and tossed them on the beach, twisted, torn and broken.

At least six of the planes were totally wrecked, and of the other eleven naval officials today were hopeful that the motors and less fragile portions could be recovered.

Meanwhile, an inquiry was ordered from the navy department to ascertain if there had been negligence or "bungling" in this latest peace-time catastrophe to the navy, which wiped out nearly the entire sea-plane contingent of the Atlantic coast.

The wrecked planes were part of the Flotilla of 23 that were sent to Baltimore for maneuvers in connection with the Schneider cup races. They comprised two complete squadrons, under command of Commander T. G. Ellyson.

They cost $25,000 each without motors, which will make the monetary oss in the disaster run to considerable figure.

HIGHS DEFEATED BY LEETONIA, 6-0

Another single touchdown margin gave the Orange and Black football team of Wellsville high its third successive setback of the season Saturday at Leetonia.

One touchdown represents the total scoring and gives the Leetonians another boost onward in the race for county laurels.

In their first game, Klinck's eleven lost to Dover, 12 to 6, the Doverites copping by a single touchdown. Last week, the locals were nosed out by Chester, the West Virginians scoring a touchdown while the Klinck eleven was registering on a safety. And again Saturday, one lone touchdown turned the trick.

The Orange and Black battled the central countians from start to finish, making the champions earn every inch of territory they covered in their march to conquest. But their inexperience counted too heavily against them. They were pitted against a veteran line and a heady quarterback who ran his backs well and the combination was too much for Klinck's light, green team.

The local outfit today turns its attention to the contest scheduled with Girard high next Saturday afternoon at Central Park. They are anticipating an engagement fully as strenuous as the Leetonia clash.

FLAMES THREATEN DRUG STORE HERE

The timely arrival of J. F. Calhoun, druggist, at his place of business, 335 Main street, at 7 o'clock this morning, prevented what might have resulted in a disastrous fire.

Flames, originating from alighted cigarette, smouldering all night long in an improvised cuspidor, a small sawdust filled box, broke out a few moments before Mr. Calhoun's arrival.

The cigarette had been tossed into the sawdust box Sunday night. It burned slowly through the sawdust, filling the drug store with smoke. Early this morning the fire caught the flooring and a small hole had been burned out, with the flames continuing to spread when Calhoun opened the store.

A bucket of water extinguished the fire with little damage.

Leonard Euman

Prominent Man tells.. how he was relieved of Kidney Trouble and Backache

New Lexington, Ohio — "I was troubled with my kidneys. The excretion was voided drop by drop, with severe pain and constant desire. I also had pain in my back under my short ribs and in my side. WOMAN DENTIST, REDS' VICTIM, NOW WAITRESS

Russian Refugee Finds Aid in Denver Thru Clubs.

FATHER SLAIN

Mother Exiled to Siberia, Husband Lost.

DENVER, Colo.—A victim of the Bolshevist uprising in Russia, from which country she escaped after many terrifying experiences, Sofia Poushkareff, despite her linguistic accomplishments and the fact that she graduated last June from the dental college of Denver University, today is acting as a waitress in a local hotel.

The charming Ukranian woman speaks Russian, French, German, Turkish, Italian and English though it is the latter language htat she has some difficulty with and until she masters it more thoroughly her certificate to practice dentistry is being held up.

In the meantime, she says, she must earn a living, and is performing the duties of a waitress in a smart coffee shop here.

Beset By Troubles

It was during t he Russian revolution and following assumption of power by the Bolshevists that Madame Pouskareli found herself faced with a world of difficulties.

"They swept down upon us like a battalion," she said. "My father, a professional man, was killed. My mother and sister were exiled to Siberia; my child died of want and exposure. My husband, who had been a captain in the army of the Czar, was reported missing, and I, as a nurse in the "White" army escaped by way of Constantinople and made my way to America."

Small of stature, with flashing black eyes glowing in a face made serious by much trouble, Madame Poushkareff seems determined to conquer sorrow.

After her arrival in Colorado, the young Russian refugee, through efforts of members of the Colorado Federation of Women's Clubs was enabled to procure a scholarship in the Denver University dental college, completing her studies last June.

Forced To Be Waitress

"But there was some slight hitch when I applied for my certificate to practice," she explained, "and I will be delayed in opening offices.

"I must live, though—and I must save money for my mother and sister. So I have become a waitress.

"There are many tears in such a job, but also much joy. For, to my table come many persons from all over the world. They speak languages I know well, and talk to me when they learn that I know what they say.

It's Cruel to "Physic" a Child

DR. CALDWELL AT AGE 83

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

Prominent Man tells.. how he was relieved of Kidney Trouble and Backache

New Lexington, Ohio — "I was troubled with my kidneys. The excretion was voided drop by drop, with severe pain and constant desire. I also had pain in my back under my short ribs and in my side. I was this way for over a week. I bought a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets which benefited me greatly. After using two bottles, I was able to work again. I shall always praise 'Anuric' to anyone suffering from backache or any kidney complaint that can be cured by medicine, for the Anuric Tablets are the best that money can buy."—Leonard Euman, 214 High street.

Realizing the great need for an effective home remedy to correct kidney troubles in their early stages, Dr. Pierce put his staff of skilled physicians and chemists to work on the problem. In time the worked out this ideal formula, which is called "An-uric" and now sold by all druggists. If you desire a trial package, send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalid's Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y.

WOMAN DENTIST, REDS' VICTIM, NOW WAITRESS

Russian Refugee Finds Aid in Denver Thru Clubs.

FATHER SLAIN

Mother Exiled to Siberia, Husband Lost.

DENVER, Colo.—A victim of the Bolshevist uprising in Russia, from which country she escaped after many terrifying experiences, Sofia Poushkareff, despite her linguistic accomplishments and the fact that she graduated last June from the dental college of Denver University, today is acting as a waitress in a local hotel.

The charming Ukranian woman speaks Russian, French, German, Turkish, Italian and English though it is the latter language htat she has some difficulty with and until she masters it more thoroughly her certificate to practice dentistry is being held up.

In the meantime, she says, she must earn a living, and is performing the duties of a waitress in a smart coffee shop here.

Beset By Troubles

It was during t he Russian revolution and following assumption of power by the Bolshevists that Madame Pouskareli found herself faced with a world of difficulties.

"They swept down upon us like a battalion," she said. "My father, a professional man, was killed. My mother and sister were exiled to Siberia; my child died of want and exposure. My husband, who had been a captain in the army of the Czar, was reported missing, and I, as a nurse in the "White" army escaped by way of Constantinople and made my way to America."

Small of stature, with flashing black eyes glowing in a face made serious by much trouble, Madame Poushkareff seems determined to conquer sorrow.

After her arrival in Colorado, the young Russian refugee, through efforts of members of the Colorado Federation of Women's Clubs was enabled to procure a scholarship in the Denver University dental college, completing her studies last June.

Forced To Be Waitress

"But there was some slight hitch when I applied for my certificate to practice," she explained, "and I will be delayed in opening offices.

"I must live, though—and I must save money for my mother and sister. So I have become a waitress.

"There are many tears in such a job, but also much joy. For, to my table come many persons from all over the world. They speak languages I know well, and talk to me when they learn that I know what they say.

It's Cruel to "Physic" a Child

DR. CALDWELL AT AGE 83

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

EAST LIVERPOOL — AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

MONDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1925.

Absent Voters, Attention!

Judging from the number of applications received by the board of deputy state supervisors of elections, Columbiana county electors have forgotten that the Ohio legislature placed an absent voters' law on the statute books in 1917.

Although the 30-day period designated for the acceptance of requests for ballots from voters who expect to be absent from their home precinct on election day expires next Saturday, less than 100 applications have been filed.

This poor showing indicates either a lack of interest in the selection of municipal, township, board of education and judicial officers as well as indifference to the fate of special proposals, to be submitted, on Tuesday, November 3, or electors are unmindful of their privileges under the enactment.

If business or pleasure calls you away from your home city, vote before you go. Or, if you neglect to do so, mail your application for ballots. Don't disfranchise yourself.

Tax Reduction

It looks as if the leading business of the country for the next three months or so will be reducing federal taxes. So everybody might as well get into the game. It's everybody's business, anyhow. The hearings opened at Washington by the house committee, with Secretary Mellon's recommendations, make a good starter.

Inasmuch as the small incomes benefited most by the last reduction, it is right that the large incomes should have an inning now. There will be little objection to lowering the surtaxes about one-half, to relieve the big fellows and stimulate business enterprise. That is, provided the little fellows can still feel that they are sharing as fully as they should in the cutting of these tax melons. There must be some cutting all along the line.

If the treasury program really includes, as it is understood to, the repeal of the "earned income" exemption. Mr. Mellon may expect hostility on that point if not elsewhere. That exemption was warmly welcomed last year, not only because it meant a saving to so large a class of taxpayers but because it is considered proper in principle. Most citizens agree that income obtained by useful work deserves more consideration than income derived from capital or gifts, without current effort.

There will be plenty of argument about the proper exemption level above which income taxes are to be levied, as well as about the rates.

There will be endless argument, too, about the value of the federal inheritance tax, which if it is not repealed is sure to be greatly modified.

Two Feudists Have Shaken Hands

Reduced to its simplest terms, the treaty of Locarno is important because it seems to end the feud between France and Germany.

It is as if two feudist families in the Kentucky mountains, after generations of mutual killing, had wearied of the senseless slaughter and suffering and come together to shake hands, agreeing to submit their quarrels to the law courts.

Human nature being what it is, this agreement does not necessarily insure peace between the feudists. But it seems better insurance than any other pledges given since the World war. It is evidently no more formal composition of statesmen, to be blown away by the first breath of popular passion, but a pact which has its roots in the popular feeling of both countries. Treaties can be made good only by the will of the people. So this treaty has the very best of auspices.

France and Germany, after an enmity reaching back for many centuries, have agreed to do their best to get along together. They have reinforced the friendly word and hand-clasp by solemn pledges before the world, and by common-sense measures calculated to minimize friction between them.

Peace for some years, at least, seems assured. And peace, maintained on such terms, may grow to be a normal situation, as hatred and warfare were normal before.

Engine Economy

In a recent airplane race in the east for small, light planes, everybody was surprised to find that the race was won by the "weakest motor." It was an air-cooled motor of only 16.7 horsepower. Mounted in a small biplane, it made the surprising speed of 76.4 miles an hour. Its fuel consumption was very small.

There need not have been so much surprise. Remarkable results have been attained in Europe in planes with still less power. And these results, it should hardly be necessary to say, depend more on the design of the plane itself than on the motor. It is found that a small plane of light build, and with good streamlines, offering little air resistance and requiring little power to hold it aloft, will often do as well as a big, heavy plane with a high-powered engine.

The tendency in automobiles lately has been toward smaller and lighter cars that can be driven by small, light engines, making lower original cost and high operating efficiency. The same principle should apply in planes.

First California had her real estate boom, then Florida. Now—and please don't all speak at once—which of the other 46 states will be next?

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 26. — Diary of a modern Samuel Pepys: Up fairly betimes and to breakfast with Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the explorer, and then Billy De Beck, the cartoonist, took me to ride in his new gasoline buggy and he has a chauffeur, the rich zany.

Home and at my labor and found an autographed copy of Charles K. Harris' latest song, and came memories of the first tune I played on the mandolin, "After the Ball," which he wrote.

In the evening with my wife to a public house for dinner and had the tastiest thick pea soup ever I ate, and we saw Addison Mizner and Marie Dressler and that was about all. So to walk home and to bed.

What, by the way, has become of the mandolin player? George Ade immortalized him in a slang fable. Otherwise he seems forgotten. The only mandolin player I've seen in years was in San Sebastian, Spain, a strolling troubador. Callow youths now master the uke and saxaphone. The mandolin used to be sold by mail for $3.75 with five lessons free. One with finger board inlaid with pearl gave a young man almost the standing of a young blood with a fast horse. I find no mandolin teachers listed in the New York telephone book. There are still bicycles and there ought to be mandolins.

Ed Womeldorff taught almost everybody in our town to play a mandolin at 25 cents a lesson—at the home, 35 cents. Ed also played the violin, banjo and E flat cornet besides clerking in Kerr's hardware store. When he passed away he was one of the richest men in town.

In a Times Square jeweler's window, bricked and looted by robbers of rings and things, hangs a rather pathetic sign: "We have only the plush boxes left. You might as well call for them."

These little shoe box stores are special targets of cowardly marauders who travel in packs and never give a lone proprietor a chance. They enter with guns unsheathed and beat and gag him before he has a chance to fight for what likely represents years of self-sacrifice and toil. As clerks they have saved for years to have a little place for their own and then they are wiped out in a twinkle. Most of the small shop stick-up men, the police say, are what police term "rats"—lowest epithet of the underworld. They show no courage and even when they go on the uneven forays first prime themselves with drugs. They have their autos racing at the curb for quick getaways and they shoot unarmed and innocent passersby without the slightest qualm.

In one of the dramas there was a yoke of oxen used nightly. Around 8 o'clock when the traffic lull came they were driven westward across the avenue to the theatre. The driver wore a wide yellow Texas hat and a red bandanna around his throat. He was the real thing and chewed tobacco. There was fear in the eyes of the oxen and nothing I have ever seen had the appearance of being so out of place in the metropolis. Pedestrians stopped to watch them out of sight. Times Square touched off a barnyard scene several years ago when a chicken fluttered from a produce wagon crate. It was during the after-theatre rush. Thousands joined the chase and traffic was enmeshed in a Gargantuan snarl. The chicken fled down a subway kiosk and when order was restored ambulances carried three injured in the crush to hospitals. Big town—this New York!

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 26.—A recent dispatch from Berlin carried news that is likely to cause a tremendous stir in circles where the opera and drama are much discussed. This story, reported by Samuel Spewack, and given to him by Vladimar Namirovitch, director of the Musical Studio of the Moscow Art theatre, declared that Siegfried in a sack suit is the Russian reply to an English challenge of Hamlet in knickerbockers.

Dantchenko, who is a portly person, has decided that the soviets have a monopoly in revolution, confining it to such things as politics, government, sociology, religion, and the like, and he has taken it upon himself to start something in another field. He has elected to foment discontent in artistic circles and begin an operatic revolution.

He arrived in Berlin with the announcement about Siegfried in a sack suit and declared that he would shortly take his company to America to demonstrate a belief he fostered. The belief in question is that opera can be made plausible.

When Hamlet appeared, not long ago, with all the modern trappings, theatregoers and students of the drama gasped and stood wide-eyed at the spectacle. There was the melancholy Dane, as melancholy as ever, but looking like he might have been a college boy who had just gone through the dire experience of having a co-ed break a date with him, giving his dissertation about his father's ghost and to be or not to be. And the rest of the characters might have been gentlemanly and lady-like Britishers of the present day, characteristically English, on their way to Wembley.

Hamlet Was Improved.

Reports were that the audience received the revamped piece well and declared that frock coats and toppers were very attractive as habiliments for Polonius, Laertes, and the rest. Contextually, they said, the play was not at all impaired, and that the illusion was carried through perfectly. Some even went so far as to declare that it was an improvement over the Hamlet given in clothes of the period in which he lived.

This modernization of the drama, striking a responsive chord in the person of Dantchenko, promises to bring interesting results. Already dramatic critics have expressed their views concerning it and there is a division of opinion as to what it will lead to. There are those who declare that by putting Hamlet in plus-fours the producers are bringing him closer to popular understanding and enlarging the public to which the play appeals. They declare that by stripping him of his antiquated vestments Hamlet is made more plausible, but the illusion created is more real than before.

The opposition decry the movement and expect it to degrade dramatic art. There are loud outcries that it will destroy the dramatic atmosphere that has always surrounded it, making it a burlesque of the original. They say it removes the abstruse and the intellectual feeling inspired by the original and it takes it out of the hands of Shakespeare and exposes it to the ravages of modernism. They aver that such things have gone too far and some of them point to the burlesque of Shaw's "Saint Joan," recently given in Vienna, as an illustration of what is coming.

The impression that Dantchenko and his singing actors will make in New York when they present Carmen is, of course, conjectural. He plans to present an entirely new version of Bizet's work, which for many years, seemed doomed to extinction, but which has risen to undreamed of popularity until its stirring motifs have been declared by many to be the most thrilling in opera.

Not So Artificial.

In this new version he plans to prove that singers can act, that a libretto can be made dramatic, and that a chorus, instead of being deterrent to action helps it by being shelved on a platform and treated as a vocal orchestra. He also plans to find a formula whereby singers can appear in sack suits, without makeup, and with stage trappings and swords. His contention here is that there will be less artificiality and better illusion.

He points to the fact that the Moscow Art theatre many years ago played Tchekov without makeup. The shooting scene was disposed of and the actor merely stamped his feet. Yet the illusion was preserved because the actors were so well established in their roles. He declared that the opera, if it does not find a singer that can act, will die of stagnation, for, to use his words, "either musical drama is presented or an opera becomes a concert marred by masquerade and bad acting."

This view is interesting in that it is striking at the outcry which for years has been heard from opera goers, namely, that the singers are gauche in their movements if they attempt them, that they are often so affected and effervescent as to render their performance ridiculous, or that they stand transfixed to the stage, singing their parts with mechanical precision. Dantchenko's contention is that if Siegfried were played by a genuine actor, the part is more convincing than if it were played by a singing puppet, and that often the singing puppet destroys his art as a musician by his poor acting. Siegfried could sing or speak his lines and could wear a sack suit too, if he were a real actor and it would be far superior to the singing automaton, moving as the director bids. He says he merely wished to show the way so tha tothers will follow and perhaps find a better means than he intends to try. His greatest goal is to bring the theatre to the opera and strip it of what he terms faded tinsel.

Russia is divided on the question and there is no little bitterness in the hostile camps. The most bitter opponents, however, declare that the renovation of the libretto is an interesting experiment.

Shoes sent to chilly Alaska from this country in seven months of this year numbered 20,558 pairs for men and boys and 8,072 pairs for women, while those shipped to sunny Hawaii included 98,613 for males and 48,692 for females.

Most citizens agree that income obtained by useful work deserves more consideration than income derived from capital or gifts, without current effort.

There will be plenty of argument about the proper exemption level above which income taxes are to be levied, as well as about the rates.

There will be endless argument, too, about the value of the federal inheritance tax, which if it is not repealed is sure to be greatly modified.

Two Feudists Have Shaken Hands

Reduced to its simplest terms, the treaty of Locarno is important because it seems to end the feud between France and Germany.

It is as if two feudist families in the Kentucky mountains, after generations of mutual killing, had wearied of the senseless slaughter and suffering and come together to shake hands, agreeing to submit their quarrels to the law courts.

Human nature being what it is, this agreement does not necessarily insure peace between the feudists. But it seems better insurance than any other pledges given since the World war. It is evidently no more formal composition of statesmen, to be blown away by the first breath of popular passion, but a pact which has its roots in the popular feeling of both countries. Treaties can be made good only by the will of the people. So this treaty has the very best of auspices.

France and Germany, after an enmity reaching back for many centuries, have agreed to do their best to get along together. They have reinforced the friendly word and hand-clasp by solemn pledges before the world, and by common-sense measures calculated to minimize friction between them.

Peace for some years, at least, seems assured. And peace, maintained on such terms, may grow to be a normal situation, as hatred and warfare were normal before.

Engine Economy

In a recent airplane race in the east for small, light planes, everybody was surprised to find that the race was won by the "weakest motor." It was an air-cooled motor of only 16.7 horsepower. Mounted in a small biplane, it made the surprising speed of 76.4 miles an hour. Its fuel consumption was very small.

There need not have been so much surprise. Remarkable results have been attained in Europe in planes with still less power. And these results, it should hardly be necessary to say, depend more on the design of the plane itself than on the motor. It is found that a small plane of light build, and with good streamlines, offering little air resistance and requiring little power to hold it aloft, will often do as well as a big, heavy plane with a high-powered engine.

The tendency in automobiles lately has been toward smaller and lighter cars that can be driven by small, light engines, making lower original cost and high operating efficiency. The same principle should apply in planes.

First California had her real estate boom, then Florida. Now—and please don't all speak at once—which of the other 46 states will be next?

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 26. — Diary of a modern Samuel Pepys: Up fairly betimes and to breakfast with Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the explorer, and then Billy De Beck, the cartoonist, took me to ride in his new gasoline buggy and he has a chauffeur, the rich zany.

Home and at my labor and found an autographed copy of Charles K. Harris' latest song, and came memories of the first tune I played on the mandolin, "After the Ball," which he wrote.

In the evening with my wife to a public house for dinner and had the tastiest thick pea soup ever I ate, and we saw Addison Mizner and Marie Dressler and that was about all. So to walk home and to bed.

What, by the way, has become of the mandolin player? George Ade immortalized him in a slang fable. Otherwise he seems forgotten. The only mandolin player I've seen in years was in San Sebastian, Spain, a strolling troubador. Callow youths now master the uke and saxaphone. The mandolin used to be sold by mail for $3.75 with five lessons free. One with finger board inlaid with pearl gave a young man almost the standing of a young blood with a fast horse. I find no mandolin teachers listed in the New York telephone book. There are still bicycles and there ought to be mandolins.

Ed Womeldorff taught almost everybody in our town to play a mandolin at 25 cents a lesson at the home, 35 cents. Ed also played the violin, banjo and E flat cornet besides clerking in Kerr's hardware store. When he passed away he was one of the richest men in town.

In a Times Square jeweler's window, bricked and looted by robbers of rings and things, hangs a rather pathetic sign: "We have only the plush boxes left. You might as well call for them."

These little shoe box stores are special targets of cowardly marauders who travel in packs and never give a lone proprietor a chance. They enter with guns unsheathed and beat and gag him before he has a chance to fight for what likely represents years of self-sacrifice and toil. As clerks they have saved for years to have a little place for their own and then they are wiped out in a twinkle. Most of the small shop stick-up men, the police say, are what police term "rats"—lowest epithet of the underworld. They show no courage and even when they go on the uneven forays first prime themselves with drugs. They have their autos racing at the curb for quick getaways and they shoot unarmed and innocent passersby without the slightest qualm.

In one of the dramas there was a yoke of oxen used nightly. Around 8 o'clock when the traffic lull came they were driven westward across the avenue to the theatre. The driver wore a wide yellow Texas hat and a red bandanna around his throat. He was the real thing and chewed tobacco. There was fear in the eyes of the oxen and nothing I have ever seen had the appearance of being so out of place in the metropolis. Pedestrians stopped to watch them out of sight. Times Square touched off a barnyard scene several years ago when a chicken fluttered from a produce wagon crate. It was during the after-theatre rush. Thousands joined the chase and traffic was enmeshed in a Gargantuan snarl. The chicken fled down a subway kiosk and when order was restored ambulances carried three injured in the crush to hospitals. Big town—this New York!

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 26. — A recent dispatch from Berlin carried news that is likely to cause a tremendous stir in circles where the opera and drama are much discussed. This story, reported by Samuel Spewack, and given to him by Vladimar Namirovitch, director of the Musical Studio of the Moscow Art theatre, declared that Siegfried in a sack suit is the Russian reply to an English challenge of Hamlet in knickerbockers.

Dantchenko, who is a portly person, has decided that the soviets have a monopoly in revolution, confining it to such things as politics, government, sociology, religion, and the like, and he has taken it upon himself to start something in another field. He has elected to foment discontent in artistic circles and begin an operatic revolution.

He arrived in Berlin with the announcement about Siegfried in a sack suit and declared that he would shortly take his company to America to demonstrate a belief he fostered. The belief in question is that opera can be made plausible.

When Hamlet appeared, not long ago, with all the modern trappings, theatregoers and students of the drama gasped and stood wide-eyed at the spectacle. There was the melancholy Dane, as melancholy as ever, but looking like he might have been a college boy who had just gone through the dire experience of having a co-ed break a date with him, giving his dissertation about his father's ghost and to be or not to be. And the rest of the characters might have been gentlemanly and lady-like Britishers of the present day, characteristically English, on their way to Wembley.

Hamlet Was Improved.

Reports were that the audience received the revamped piece well and declared that frock coats and toppers were very attractive as habiliments for Polonius, Laertes, and the rest. Contextually, they said, the play was not at all impaired, and that the illusion was carried through perfectly. Some even went so far as to declare that it was an improvement over the Hamlet given in clothes of the period in which he lived.

This modernization of the drama, striking a responsive chord in the person of Dantchenko, promises to bring interesting results. Already dramatic critics have expressed their views concerning it and there is a division of opinion as to what it will lead to. There are those who declare that by putting Hamlet in plus-fours the producers are bringing him closer to popular understanding and enlarging the public to which the play appeals. They declare that by stripping him of his antiquated vestments Hamlet is made more plausible, but the illusion created is more real than before.

The opposition decry the movement and expect it to degrade dramatic art. There are loud outcries that it will destroy the dramatic atmosphere that has always surrounded it, making it a burlesque of the original. They say it removes the abstruse and the intellectual feeling inspired by the original and it takes it out of the hands of Shakespeare and exposes it to the ravages of modernism. They aver that such things have gone too far and some of them point to the burlesque of Shaw's "Saint Joan," recently given in Vienna, as an illustration of what is coming.

The impression that Dantchenko and his singing actors will make in New York when they present Carmen is, of course, conjectural. He plans to present an entirely new version of Bizet's work, which for many years, seemed doomed to extinction, but which has risen to undreamed of popularity until its stirring motifs have been declared by many to be the most thrilling in opera.

Not So Artificial.

In this new version he plans to prove that singers can act, that a libretto can be made dramatic, and that a chorus, instead of being deterrent to action helps it by being shelved on a platform and treated as a vocal orchestra. He also plans to find a formula whereby singers can appear in sack suits, without makeup, and with stage trappings and swords. His contention here is that there will be less artificiality and better illusion.

He points to the fact that the Moscow Art theatre many years ago played Tchekov without makeup. The shooting scene was disposed of and the actor merely stamped his feet. Yet the illusion was preserved because the actors were so well established in their roles. He declared that the opera, if it does not find a singer that can act, will die of stagnation, for, to use his words, "either musical drama is presented or an opera becomes a concert marred by masquerade and bad acting."

This view is interesting in that it is striking at the outcry which for years has been heard from opera goers, namely, that the singers are gauche in their movements if they attempt them, that they are often so affected and effervescent as to render their performance ridiculous, or that they stand transfixed to the stage, singing their parts with mechanical precision. Dantchenko's contention is that if Siegfried were played by a genuine actor, the part is more convincing than if it were played by a singing puppet, and that often the singing puppet destroys his art as a musician by his poor acting. Siegfried could sing or speak his lines and could wear a sack suit too, if he were a real actor and it would be far superior to the singing automaton, moving as the director bids. He says he merely wished to show the way so tha tothers will follow and perhaps find a better means than he intends to try. His greatest goal is to bring the theatre to the opera and strip it of what he terms faded tinsel.

Russia is divided on the question and there is no little bitterness in the hostile camps. The most bitter opponents, however, declare that the renovation of the libretto is an interesting experiment.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

SURRENDER

The Story Of A Girl Who Dared

By Edgar Doe Norris

CHAPTER 78.

It was an exhilirating moment. Amoura, unmoved by Tommy Loughley's agitation, studied, analyzed him. She wondered if all of his feelings were real; if men, when they were proposing, did not act as they thought men proposing marriage should act, instead of as they really felt.

"Oh, you know what I'm trying to say, Amoura!" he exclaimed with a more intense show of feeling.

His eyes, she thought, did not indicate the ardor he was uttering. "Yes, Tommy, I know what you're trying to say.'

"Then," he said, taking her hands in his tense grasp, "Say the words that will make me the happiest man in the world."

Too dramatic, she thought. This was the way men did it in novels, on the stage. She tried to appear deeply affected. "I'm sorry, Tommy. . . . I like you, and all that . . . But, but . . . . I don't love you."

He winced, but did not relax his grip upon her hands. "Tell me, Amoura, is there any hope? . . . . I've thought of nothing but you since you went away . . . were stolen away."

She turned her eyes away, and was silent for a moment before she answered: "I don't know, Tommy."

If her heart could have spoken it would have said, "She does know."

"Marry me, Amoura, and we will travel, wander, seek adventures. You won't have to be tied down to this conventional life you detest. I know how you feel, I understand you. You don't want to be tied down. I want a pal, not a humdrum wife. . . ."

How could she send him away without hurting him? What could she say? She must not make him suffer as she had suffered—as she was suffering. Ah, Philip, she thought, if only you knew!

"Be patient with me Tommy. Wait awhile. I'm still upset. I——'

"Yes, I know.' H squeezed her hand hopefully.

Uncomfortable, she arose, pulling her hands free tenderly. "Let's join mother and father. I think they'd like to play bridge. Do you mind?"

"Bridge? Of course, of course."

Despite her good resolutions of the previous day, Amoura slept late in the morning. When she opened her eyes first, early, she felt as if she were going to have a headache, and sought to defeat it by staying in bed until she went to sleep again. Her mother awakened her after 10 o'clock.

"Your young man was rather reluctant to depart," the visitor observed, sitting down on the edge of the bed.

"Yes. He doesn't know that Westland goes to bed at 11 o'clock."

"Your father complained about being kept up so late," and she laughed. "You know he never comes in from the club before one o'clock. That man!"

"Father is getting old."

She was not thinking of her father, but of Tommy.

"Oh, don't say that, dear, don't say that! It means I'm getting old, too. Old . . ." she looked at her hands, then at her arms.

"Oh, you're still beautiful mother."

"I hope so, my daughter, but I fear you're only flattering me." Her laugh was not entirely heartfelt. "But get up. Philip Weinrich is coming over for lunch."

"Mother!" Amoura raised up in bed, "I don't want to see him."

"He just called up, like he used to, and said he was coming over for lunch. What could I say?"

"Oh, you could have told him not to, if you had wanted." She regarded her mother with a frown.

Mrs. J. Reginald Ainsley patted her daughter's hand, and smiled faintly as she said, "You can have Philip if you want him, Amoura." With that she arose nad left the room, with Amoura staring after her.

Two-thiry o'clock in the afternoon. Amoura and Philip alone in the library, either by accident or design. Amoura, nervous, is idly turning the pages of a book. Philip, lighting a cigaret, is regarding her. Suddenly, without puffing at the cigaret, he tosses it into a tray, and takes Amoura's hand, causing her to whirl around and face him.

"Amoura, you love me, don't you?"

Vest Pocket Battery May Run Car 10 Days

Leningrad.—A discovery that may have a revolutionary effect on industry is claimed by A. F. Joffe of the Academy of Science. In experimenting, Joffe says, he obtained a tremendous concentration of electrical energy in a very small object. The accumulator which he constructed and charged with energy, "sufficient to drive the most powerful motor car for ten days," is small enough to go into a waistcoat pocket, he says.

The scientist hopes it may soon be possible to apply the discovery to general industry on a large scale.

"Almost every morning, for the last five years I suffered with sick headaches. I felt this was due to nervousness, never dreaming that faulty intestinal elimination caused my suffering. I felt wretched, my appetite was gone, I lost interest in preparing my meals, life was not worth living. A few days' treatment of Carter's Little Liver Pills worked wonders. Home-made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly

Finest cough medicine you ever used. Family supply easily made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The Story Of A Girl Who Dared

By Edgar Poe Norris

CHAPTER 78.

)It was an exhilirating moment. Amoura, unmoved by Tommy Loughley's agitation, studied, analyzed him. She wondered if all of his feelings were real; if men, when they were proposing, did not act as they thought men proposing marriage should act, instead of as they really felt.

"Oh, you know what I'm trying to say, Amoura!" he exclaimed with a more intense show of feeling.

His eyes, she thought, did not indicate the ardor he was uttering. "Yes, Tommy, I know what you're trying to say.'

"Then," he said, taking her hands in his tense grasp, "Say the words that will make me the happiest man in the world."

Too dramatic, she thought. This was the way men did it in novels, on the stage. She tried to appear deeply affected. "I'm sorry, Tommy. . . . I like you, and all that . . . But, but . . . . I don't love you."

He winced, but did not relax his grip upon her hands. "Tell me, Amoura, is there any hope? . . . . I've thought of nothing but you since you went away . . . were stolen away."

She turned her eyes away, and was silent for a moment before she answered: "I don't know, Tommy."

If her heart could have spoken it would have said, "She does know."

"Marry me, Amoura, and we will travel, wander, seek adventures. You won't have to be tied down to this conventional life you detest. I know how you feel, I understand you. You don't want to be tied down. I want a pal, not a humdrum wife. . . ."

How could she send him away without hurting him? What could she say? She must not make him suffer as she had suffered—as she was suffering. Ah, Philip, she thought, if only you knew!

"Be patient with me Tommy. Wait awhile. I'm still upset. I——'

"Yes, I know.' H squeezed her hand hopefully.

Uncomfortable, she arose, pulling her hands free tenderly. "Let's join mother and father. I think they'd like to play bridge. Do you mind?"

"Bridge? Of course, of course."

Despite her good resolutions of the previous day, Amoura slept late in the morning. When she opened her eyes first, early, she felt as if she were going to have a headache, and sought to defeat it by staying in bed until she went to sleep again. Her mother awakened her after 10 o'clock.

"Your young man was rather reluctant to depart," the visitor observed, sitting down on the edge of the bed.

"Yes. He doesn't know that Westland goes to bed at 11 o'clock."

"Your father complained about being kept up so late," and she laughed. "You know he never comes in from the club before one o'clock. That man!"

"Father is getting old."

She was not thinking of her father, but of Tommy.

"Oh, don't say that, dear, don't say that! It means I'm getting old, too. Old . . ." she looked at her hands, then at her arms.

"Oh, you're still beautiful mother."

"I hope so, my daughter, but I fear you're only flattering me." Her laugh was not entirely heartfelt. "But get up. Philip Weinrich is coming over for lunch."

"Mother!" Amoura raised up in bed, "I don't want to see him."

"He just called up, like he used to, and said he was coming over for lunch. What could I say?"

"Oh, you could have told him not to, if you had wanted." She regarded her mother with a frown.

Mrs. J. Reginald Ainsley patted her daughter's hand, and smiled faintly as she said, "You can have Philip if you want him, Amoura." With that she arose nad left the room, with Amoura staring after her.

Two-thiry o'clock in the afternoon. Amoura and Philip alone in the library, either by accident or design. Amoura, nervous, is idly turning the pages of a book. Philip, lighting a cigaret, is regarding her. Suddenly, without puffing at the cigaret, he tosses it into a tray, and takes Amoura's hand, causing her to whirl around and face him.

"Amoura, you love me, don't you?"

Vest Pocket Battery May Run Car 10 Days

Leningrad.—A discovery that may have a revolutionary effect on industry is claimed by A. F. Joffe of the Academy of Science. In experimenting, Joffre says, he obtained a tremendous concentration of electrical energy in a very small object. The accumulator which he constructed and charged with energy, "sufficient to drive the most powerful motor car for ten days," is small enough to go into a waistcoat pocket, he says.

The scientist hopes it may soon be possible to apply the discovery to general industry on a large scale.

SEEKS VETERAN IN ASYLUMS AND JAILS

Mother Hunts for Son, World War Soldier.

Marquette, Mich.—Traveling about the country visiting penal institutions and asylums, hoping to find some trace of her son, Joe Anderson, World war veteran, who disappeared from Detroit, March 6, 1924, Mrs. Margaret Anderson, sixty-seven, has arrived here.

Her son enlisted when he was not yet sixteen and was assigned to Company K of the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Infantry. He was gassed overseas. Later he was charged with desertion, convicted and sent to Leavenworth prison. Mrs. Anderson walked from her home at Sioux Falls to Washington, where she sought clemency for her son from President Harding. She contended Joe was not responsible for his act because of having been gassed. President Harding paroled him.

After his parole Joe went to work at his trade as machinist. At the end of nine months he suddenly disappeared and the mother has never heard anything of him since.

Mrs. Anderson visited the Ford plants here at L'Anse and the asylum at Newberry. She said her son might be going under the name of John E. Johnson and has always given his address as Stevens Point, Wis. He is over six feet tall, thin and of blond complexion and has a scar on his chest on the left side where he was wounded in the war.

She said she is making her way to Chicago, visiting asylums and industrial centers in hope of finding some trace of her missing son.

MANY BANKRUPT AS HARD TIMES HIT NIPPONESE

Japan Suffers Worst Business Depression of Modern Era.

BANKS AFFECTED

Steps Taken to Aid Depositors and Safeguard Stability.

TOKIO.—"Hard times" have descended upon the industrial and commercial world of Japan and indications are that the year 1925 will mark the worst period of business depression the country has experienced in modern times.

An indication of the prevailing tendency is seen in teh rapid increase in bankruptcies. During the first eight months of 1925 no less than 312 business firms were adjudged bankrupt by the District Court, a larger number of failures than was recorded during all of 1924.

Banks Hard Hit.

Although all kinds of business is feeling the effect of this depression, the banks have been hit especially hard. So precarious has the position of some of the banks become that the government has been forced to adopt drastic steps for the protection of depositors and in the interest of the financial stability of the country as a whole. Approximately 75 banks whose standing was found to be doubtful have been summarily closed under orders of the finance department of the government.

Most of these banks were small concerns, some of them of the "mushroom" type that sprang up during the period of inflation during and after the World War. It is not the small and struggling banks alone, however, who have experienced difficulties in reecnt months.

The Bank of Taiwan, Formosa, which is a semi-government establishment, has recently been in difficulties. So serious did the situation become that the government was compelled to order a substantial reduction in the capital stock of the bank. This cut down the burden of interest and dividend expenses which the bank was bearing and prevented a complete failure. It meant, however, a heavy loss to stockholders through reduction of both capital and income.

The situation prevailing with regard to the smaller banks has weakened public confidence in these institutions with the result that deposits in the larger banks have greatly increased. This transfer of money from the weaker banks to the stronger ones has caused a difficult situation for the larger banks. They are compelled to pay huge sums in interest on these deposits while general business conditions are such that they are having difficulty in diverting this money to revenue-producing channels.

Firms Forced to Wall.

Besides the banks, many commercial firms have gone under and others are having a hard time to keep their heads above water. Manufacturing, shipping, power, importing, exporting and trading firms are listed among the growing number of bankrupts. So far there have been no failures of important newspapers, but several magazine concerns have gone to the wall and it is no secret that it is only by subsidies that some of the newspapers have been enabled to keep going.

Those who profess familiarity with the fundamental financial and industrial conditions of the country, however, see in the prevailing hard times the beginnings of Japan's commercial reconstruction and reorganization. They point out that, general speaking, the firms that have failed have been institutions that were established during an abnormal period in the nation's economic life. Elimination of these unstable elements was bound to come sometime. Hardship and losses are the inevitable result of the process, they contend, but the final outcome will be to "clean up" Japan's economic structure and place it upon a firmer foundation than it has been before.

Because of more efficient methods European farmers in Tunisia, raise on one-tenth the area tilled by the natives, fully seven-tenths of the total production of the country.

HEADACHE

Don't Suffer! Get a 10c package of Dr. James Headache Powders

Any kind of a headache is relieved in two minutes. Distress and pain vanish, your head clears and you are again ready for work or play. Druggists sell millions of "Dr. James' Headache Powders" because they are safe.

Piles Disappear

No Cutting or Salves Needed.

External treatments seldom cure Piles.

Nor do surgical operations.

The cause is inside—bad circulation.

The blood is stagnant, the veins flabby.

The bowel walls are weak, the parts almost dead.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send a fresh current through stagnant pools. Internal treatment is the one safe method. Ointments and cutting won't do it.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere under guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at C. G. Anderson's, who will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

SEEKS VETERAN IN ASYLUMS AND JAILS

Mother Hunts for Son, World War Soldier.

Marquette, Mich.—Traveling about the country visiting penal institutions and asylums, hoping to find some trace of her son, Joe Anderson, World war veteran, who disappeared from Detroit, March 6, 1924, Mrs. Margaret Anderson, sixty-seven, has arrived here.

Her son enlisted when he was not yet sixteen and was assigned to Company K of the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Infantry. He was gassed overseas. Later he was charged with desertion, convicted and sent to Leavenworth prison. Mrs. Anderson walked from her home at Sioux Falls to Washington, where she sought clemency for her son from President Harding. She contended Joe was not responsible for his act because of having been gassed. President Harding paroled him.

After his parole Joe went to work at his trade as machinist. At the end of nine months he suddenly disappeared and the mother has never heard anything of him since.

Mrs. Anderson visited the Ford plants here at L'Anse and the asylum at Newberry. She said her son might be going under the name of John E. Johnson and has always given his address as Stevens Point, Wis. He is over six feet tall, thin and of blond complexion and has a scar on his chest on the left side where he was wounded in the war.

She said she is making her way to Chicago, visiting asylums and industrial centers in hope of finding some trace of her missing son.

MANY BANKRUPT AS HARD TIMES HIT NIPPONESE

Japan Suffers Worst Business Depression of Modern Era.

BANKS AFFECTED

Steps Taken to Aid Depositors and Safeguard Stability.

TOKIO.—"Hard times" have descended upon the industrial and commercial world of Japan and indications are that the year 1925 will mark the worst period of business depression the country has experienced in modern times.

An indication of the prevailing tendency is seen in teh rapid increase in bankruptcies. During the first eight months of 1925 no less than 312 business firms were adjudged bankrupt by the District Court, a larger number of failures than was recorded during all of 1924.

Banks Hard Hit.

Although all kinds of business is feeling the effect of this depression, the banks have been hit especially hard. So precarious has the position of some of the banks become that the government has been forced to adopt drastic steps for the protection of depositors and in the interest of the financial stability of the country as a whole. Approximately 75 banks whose standing was found to be doubtful have been summarily closed under orders of the finance department of the government.

Most of these banks were small concerns, some of them of the "mushroom" type that sprang up during the period of inflation during and after the World War. It is not the small and struggling banks alone, however, who have experienced difficulties in recent months.

The Bank of Taiwan, Formosa, which is a semi-government establishment, has recently been in difficulties. So serious did the situation become that the government was compelled to order a substantial reduction in the capital stock of the bank. This cut down the burden of interest and dividend expenses which the bank was bearing and prevented a complete failure. It meant, however, a heavy loss to stockholders through reduction of both capital and income.

The situation prevailing with regard to the smaller banks has weakened public confidence in these institutions with the result that deposits in the larger banks have greatly increased. This transfer of money from the weaker banks to the stronger ones has caused a difficult situation for the larger banks. They are compelled to pay huge sums in interest on these deposits while general business conditions are such that they are having difficulty in diverting this money to revenue-producing channels.

Firms Forced to Wall.

Besides the banks, many commercial firms have gone under and others are having a hard time to keep their heads above water. Manufacturing, shipping, power, importing, exporting and trading firms are listed among the growing number of bankrupts. So far there have been no failures of important newspapers, but several magazine concerns have gone to the wall and it is no secret that it is only by subsidies that some of the newspapers have been enabled to keep going.

Those who profess familiarity with the fundamental financial and industrial conditions of the country, however, see in the prevailing hard times the beginnings of Japan's commercial reconstruction and reorganization. They point out that, general speaking, the firms that have failed have been institutions that were established during an abnormal period in the nation's economic life. Elimination of these unstable elements was bound to come sometime. Hardship and losses are the inevitable result of the process, they contend, but the final outcome will be to "clean up" Japan's economic structure and place it upon a firmer foundation than it has been before.

MAYOR ALBRECHT SUBMITS REPORT

According to a record just announced by Mayor Frank E. Albrecht, of Lisbon, there were 202 traffic violation cases handled in that court from January 1, 1924, up to and including October 10, last. In all there have been 376 different kinds of cases handled by Mayor Albrecht, including 71 drunks, which are included in a record of 109 liquor violations. In the same period 65 miscellaneous cases have been handled.

Traffic violations have been divided into the following classes: Operating a motor vehicle in a reckless manner, 89; light violations, 58; non-stop violations, 23; parking violations, 15; license law violations, 9; operating with cut-out open, 8.

The liquor law violations show 71 intoxications; selling and possessing 22; operating motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor, 16.

The record announced by Mayor Albrecht discloses that more cases were handled wherein violation of motor laws was charged than all other of the cases handled.

WAYNE TOWNSHIP ROAD MEETING

A good roads meeting will be held in Wayne township at noon next Thursday on the farm of Frank Rice, located on the Lisbon-Salineville road, a period being set aside for the purpose by Mr. Rice during a farm sale.

At this meeting addresses will be made by County Commissioner Conrad Berg and L. H. Johnson. L. M. Kyes, of East Palestine, may also speak.

Wayne township is vitally interested in the proposed $950,000 bond issue, as under the road improvement program of the commissioners as outlined, Wayne township will receive five miles of concrete-surfaced improved road for the payment of $5,700, and this money distributed over a period of 10 years. The tax duplicate of Wayne ownship is the lowest in the county, the valuation as the duplicate now shows being only $774,540. On this basis the township is paying but 0.6 per cent of the entire issue of $950,000. Under these circumstances Wayne will have the Salineville-Lisbon road connected in that township for the sum of $5,700, and the tax that is to be paid back to the county over a 10-year period amount to but $570 per year.

In suggesting that the road meeting be held on his farm, Mr. Rice advised the county commissioners that he would give 90 minutes for the discussion of the issue during the noon period.

LISBON-PALESTINE ROAD HEARING

On account of two courts being in session next Friday, it is likely that the road hearing on the Lisbon-East Palestine road, wherein a route is to be selected for designation as an inter-county highway, may result in the hearing being held in the law library.

The hearing is scheduled to open at 10 o'clock Friday morning. Three locations for the route has been proposed, although it has been announced that a hearing will be also held on any combination of route for this road not already designated, but which may be presented by those interested.

Director of Public Highways George F. Schlesinger has ordered the hearing, and the route that ultimately will be selected has been anticipated by the county commissioners in outlining the road program for next year as it has to do with the proposed $950,000 road bond issue.

No word has been received by the county commissioners from the state highway department relative to the designation of the East Liverpool-East Palestine road, a hearing upon which was recently held in common pleas No. 2, with Examiner Perry in charge.

AZDELL AWARDED $5 IN COURT SUIT

James C. Azdell, of St. Clair township, was awarded $5 damages by a jury in common pleas court recently in a suit which he had entered against J. C. Swickard, also of St. Clair township, to replevin a portable poultry house, alleged to have been purchased by Swickard.

Eleven of the 12 jurors signed a verdict in favor of the defendant, J. C. Swickard, viz: that the defendant keep the coop and pay $5."

The suit was carried to common pleas court from the court of Justice of the Peace W. A. Calvin. Azdell sought to recover the portable coop which Swickard is alleged to have purchased from M. K. Zimerman, Lisbon, after the property, located near Stop 55, was sold to Azdell.

Judge Walter D. Jones, in charging the jury, declared that the supreme court had ruled that a portable building is a chattel and not real estate.

REAPPRAISEMENT IS ELIMINATED

Although the state legislature passed a law at its last session ordering a reappraisement of all real estate and property in every county in Ohio during 1925, Columbiana county has been eliminated from such action, according to a ruling of the state tax commission which has just been handed down at Columbus.

The ruling of the commission, which has just been received in Lisbon by County Auditor Charles E. Hamilton, reads:

"The commission coming on to consider the application of the auditor of Columbiana county, requesting permission to dispense with a reappraisement of the real estate in said county or any sub-division thereof, in the year 1925, as provided in section 5549 G. C. as amended in O. L. 111, page 418, alleging in said application that said real estate was appraised in the year 1924 and further alleging that said property was, and now is, appraised at its true value in money for taxation purposes:

"Finds that said real estate was assessed in the year 1924."

A certified copy of this order has been filed with County Auditor Hamilton.

MAYOR ALBRECHT SUBMITS REPORT

According to a record just announced by Mayor Frank E. Albrecht, of Lisbon, there were 202 traffic violation cases handled in that court from January 1, 1924, up to and including October 10, last. In all there have been 376 different kinds of cases handled by Mayor Albrecht, including 71 drunks, which are included in a record of 109 liquor violations. In the same period 65 miscellaneous cases have been handled.

Traffic violations have been divided into the following classes: Operating a motor vehicle in a reckless manner, 89; light violations, 58; non-stop violations, 23; parking violations, 15; license law violations, 9; operating with cut-out open, 8.

The liquor law violations show 71 intoxications; selling and possessing 22; operating motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor, 16.

The record announced by Mayor Albrecht discloses that more cases were handled wherein violation of motor laws was charged than all other of the cases handled.

WAYNE TOWNSHIP ROAD MEETING

A good roads meeting will be held in Wayne township at noon next Thursday on the farm of Frank Rice, located on the Lisbon-Salineville road, a period being set aside for the purpose by Mr. Rice during a farm sale.

At this meeting addresses will be made by County Commissioner Conrad Berg and L. H. Johnson. L. M. Kyes, of East Palestine, may also speak.

Wayne township is vitally interested in the proposed $950,000 bond issue, as under the road improvement program of the commissioners as outlined, Wayne township will receive five miles of concrete-surfaced improved road for the payment of $5,700, and this money distributed over a period of 10 years. The tax duplicate of Wayne ownship is the lowest in the county, the valuation as the duplicate now shows being only $774,540. On this basis the township is paying but 0.6 per cent of the entire issue of $950,000. Under these circumstances Wayne will have the Salineville-Lisbon road connected in that township for the sum of $5,700, and the tax that is to be paid back to the county over a 10-year period amount to but $570 per year.

In suggesting that the road meeting be held on his farm, Mr. Rice advised the county commissioners that he would give 90 minutes for the discussion of the issue during the noon period.

LISBON-PALESTINE ROAD HEARING

On account of two courts being in session next Friday, it is likely that the road hearing on the Lisbon-East Palestine road, wherein a route is to be selected for designation as an inter-county highway, may result in the hearing being held in the law library.

The hearing is scheduled to open at 10 o'clock Friday morning. Three locations for the route has been proposed, although it has been announced that a hearing will be also held on any combination of route for this road not already designated, but which may be presented by those interested.

Director of Public Highways George F. Schlesinger has ordered the hearing, and the route that ultimately will be selected has been anticipated by the county commissioners in outlining the road program for next year as it has to do with the proposed $950,000 road bond issue.

No word has been received by the county commissioners from the state highway department relative to the designation of the East Liverpool-East Palestine road, a hearing upon which was recently held in common pleas No. 2, with Examiner Perry in charge.

AZDELL AWARDED $5 IN COURT SUIT

James C. Azdell, of St. Clair township, was awarded $5 damages by a jury in common pleas court recently in a suit which he had entered against J. C. Swickard, also of St. Clair township, to replevin a portable poultry house, alleged to have been purchased by Swickard.

Eleven of the 12 jurors signed a verdict in favor of the defendant, J. C. Swickard, viz: that the defendant keep the coop and pay $5."

The suit was carried to common pleas court from the court of Justice of the Peace W. A. Calvin. Azdell sought to recover the portable coop which Swickard is alleged to have purchased from M. K. Zimerman, Lisbon, after the property, located near Stop 55, was sold to Azdell.

Judge Walter D. Jones, in charging the jury, declared that the supreme court had ruled that a portable building is a chattel and not real estate.

REAPPRAISEMENT IS ELIMINATED

Although the state legislature passed a law at its last session ordering a reappraisement of all real estate and property in every county in Ohio during 1925, Columbiana county has been eliminated from such action, according to a ruling of the state tax commission which has just been handed down at Columbus.

The ruling of the commission, which has just been received in Lisbon by County Auditor Charles E. Hamilton, reads:

"The commission coming on to consider the application of the auditor of Columbiana county, requesting permission to dispense with a reappraisement of the real estate in said county or any sub-division thereof, in the year 1925, as provided in section 5549 G. C. as amended in O. L. 111, page 418, alleging in said application that said real estate was appraised in the year 1924 and further alleging that said property was, and now is, appraised at its true value in money for taxation purposes:

"Finds that said real estate was assessed in the year 1924."

A certified copy of this order has been filed with County Auditor Hamilton.

REFUSES TO CONCEDE LOSS OF BIG TEN RACE

Stagg Asserts Chicago Has Fighting Chance, Recalling Fact That Maroon Won Title Year Ago After Playing Three Tie Games; Says Penn Won Saturday Because it Played Better Football.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—They die hard in the Stagg family, if at all.

Defeated by Pennsylvania on Saturday, while Michigan and Iowa were going to the pace in the Conference free-for-all by winning from Illinois and Ohio State, respectively, Alonzo Stagg, the extremely young old man of Chicago football, decided to concede that his team would not win the Big Ten title again.

In his pensive, deliberate way, he summoned the following arguments by way of rebuttal:

Chicago won the championship last year after all seemed lost. It won in spite of three tie games and this year, to date, it has only one. That anything can happen to Michigan and Iowa, although the latter's prospects are almost excessively plausible with only Wisconsin and Minnesota to beat.

"But we have a fighting chance and that's all any man can ask," he added.

"We played good football; Pennsylvania played better,' was his second comment.

He didn't say, however, that Chicago played good football only after the eastern outfit had scored what proved to be the winning touchdown. The Maroon seems to be notorious as a slow starter, this being its cardinal weakness, unless one wishes to stress the team's lack of versatility on attack.

It doesn't seem capable of varying its plays, although Stagg has given it plenty of good ones. On Saturday, he uncovered several passing plays that looked good until the passer let the ball go. In most cases, it was passed beyond the receiver or the latter failed to get in the clear.

There appears to be no good reason for this ineptitude on the part of the Chicago team. It is big, it is fast and it does not lack for veteran material. Yet it really clicks only when running plays are under way and the day has gone when a team can hope to strong-arm its path to touchdowns.

As the situation stands, Chicago has only two scoring methods. One is to use "five yards" McCarty on off tackle and line plays. The other is to get Bob Curley into position for a field goal. This young man doesn't need much maneuvering, any spot inside the fifty yard line being suitable to his exceedingly well behaved ankle.

As a matter of fact, Curley has kicked Chicago into one Conference title and right on the heels of another during the last two seasons.

Give the young man a little more weight and it would be something of a different operation to keep him out of an all American selection. As it is, he is the welterweight personification of what Chicago needs most—an open field runner.

It fairly oozes power on the attack, with McCarty, Ernwein, Timme and Curley in operation. It has very little deception.

The power is amplified as one comes to the forward line, averaging close to 200 pounds.

Just a very good football team that cannot seem to realize its best potentialities, in spite of what one of the greatest football coaches of all times can do.

Here is the impression the opposing defense men get of Nicholas Kutsch, latest star of the western football world and brilliant light of the University of Iowa football team. He is fighting it out with Red Grange of Illinois, Benny Friedman of Michigan and Elmer Marek of Ohio State for western grid honors.

Panthers Do Things Up Right; Dedicate Field and Beat Plaid

By KATHARINE BRUSH.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 26.—Whether it is that the gods weep when they see a lady reporter attempting to cover gentlemens' sports, I know not, but anyway, it always rains. It rained Saturday. It rained on the new Pitt stadium. It rained on the 45,000 spectators huddled in the new Pitt stadium. It rained on the broad blue-and-orange backs of the Pitt Panthers, and on the not less broad scarlet backs of the warriors of Carnegie Tech. The only people at the game on whom it didn't rain were the sporting writers, sitting pretty under glass in the press box. Much to my indignation they don't allow women in the press box at football games, and so I sat in the open and it rained on me. In the middle of the first quarter it stopped raining, of course, but that was locking the stable after the horse was stolen. Everybody by that time was much too wet to care.

But there's no use talking—aside from rain, Pittsburgh does know how to do things properly. When they dedicated a new stadium, they see to it that the team that belongs to the stadium wins the game. I saw the Yale Bowl dedicated with a Yale licking that I'd rather not talk about, and I saw Michigan run up a score so high that they were calling for adding machines in the press box the day the Ohio State stadium was dedicated. But Pittsburgh has a great sense of the fitness of things. The beautiful new monument to the athlethic valor of the University of Pittsburgh was dedicated with a 12 0 victory.

It all began with a cross country race between Pitt and Carnegie Tech over the Schenley Park course. This took place at 11 a. m., and the trackisters won—at least, so somebody told me when I got down to breakfast. The gates of the stadium opened at 11:15, and a game between the Freshmen of the two colleges was played at 11:30. It was raining hard then, and I understand there was nobody much in the stadium but 22 mothers and 22 fathers. At 1:30 there was a parade consisting of several hundred pairs of overshoes each containing the pedal extremities of a Pitt professor or a stadium instigator or an ex-football star of Pitt. Thus the paths of gridiron glory lead but through the mud-puddles. And at 2:30 the game began.

Did you ever see seventeen miles of seats? The new Pitt stadium has that many. They weren't entirely filled at the game this afternoon. Continuing to speak in statistics, I should say that approximately 12 of the 17 miles had people in them. And not only people,but other things. Raincoats. Umbrellas. Soggy newspapers. Pieces of oil-cloth and pocket flasks. It was, all in all, quite a spectacle. The steep slops of the stadium bloomed like a florists window, with yellow slickers, and blue and red and purple feminine raincoats, and wee pink faces. And the playing field was not less remarkable to look at. The players who had issued forth immaculate became, after the first couple of downs, almost indistinguishable hunks of mud. Their faces looked like the faces of women having clay packs in a beauty shop. Their once-white legs were African in hue. The letters on the backs of their jerseys were practically obliterated, so that you couldn't tell one from the other.

Every few minutes time had to be called and towels rushed to the scene of action, so that they could wipe the mud out of their eyes. Every down sent several of them sliding on their hips in several directions. The ball was a cake of soap—in slipperiness, not in cleanliness.

But it took more than this to daunt the spirits and dull the enthusiasms of the rooters on both sides of the vast concrete cup. The cheering was loud and long, and especially effective since the walls of the stadium gave it back in a vast tumultuous echo. The bands of both institutions, Tech's in their Scottish kilts and Pitt's in dignified blue and gold uniforms were there in full force. The usual song-battle between the two cheering sections took place between the halves, and rockets were sent off at the same time by a band of collegians dressed in black hoods, so that they resembled members of the Ku Klux dipped in ink. There is a cemetery on a hill back of the Pitt stadium, and just as the largest and noisiest rocket went off a funeral procession passed on its way there. From where I sat, in the front row, the cars in the procession seemed to be rolling along on the top rim of the stadium. A wierd effect. It quite ruined my afternoon.

There was great consternation among Carnegie fans all around me because Bastian and Sebastian of the Tech team would both be out of the lineup. I know so little about the local gridiron talent that I thought they meant a man named Bastian and C. Bastian, his brother, and even gave a melancholy sigh for Mrs. Bastian, with both her boys laid up. (The above will illustrate plainly why they don't let women sit in the press box, nor put their stories on the sporting pages.)

The fact remains that neither youth was in the game until the very last, when Sebastian went in. For the most part, yes we had no Bastians. Se or otherwise.

The last half was enlivened by Gustafson's touchdown, and by a red faced worthy two seats away from me who arose in the midst of an exciting moment and sang a solo lauding the glories of West Virginia, very solemnly and, I think you'll agree somewhat inappropriately. When it was explained to him in no uncertain terms that he was in error he apologized to the crowd and subsided. Except for these two happy moments the last half was a monotony of runners who ran wide but not far, and kicks that went high but not long, and mud, and chills.

Summing up, I should say it was a good day for the Panthers and a perfectly elegant day for ducks.

LAUGHLIN WINS 3 TO 1 DECISION

Retain League Lead by Beating New Brighton.

On a wet and scoggy field that made good football almost impossible, the Homer Laughlin soccer club won a 3 to 1 decision over the New Brighton eleven Saturday afternoon at New Brighton.

Several changes were noticeable in the Laughlin lineup. Shaw performed at outside right in place of Bower, on the injured list, and Brown took Foster's left half. The New Brighton eleven played an aggressive game but was unable to make its kicks count. From a good pass by Haugh, Shaw missed a goal by inches in the opening half.

The second half saw play largely in New Brighton territory. Carnie proved a good mud plower, his speed enabling him to get away for the first goal. Five miutes later Strutt, of New Brighton, tied the count. Haugh made it to for Laughlin on a pass from Aldridge. After a good pass from Plant, Carnie registered the third counter for the locals.

ENGLISH PUNCHES LINE FOR SOLE TOUCHDOWN IN FIRST PERIOD OF GAME

Leader of Ceramic City Eleven, Starting in Midfield, Penetrates Lisbon Line for 50 yards in Two Plays; Final East Liverpool Offensive Puts Ball Within Feet of Enemy Goal as Whistle Ends Battle.

Pitted against a light put practically veteran Lisbon high school squad, battling in its own back yard, Coach O. V. Boone's Blue and White gridders Saturday began their Columbiana county championship campaign by defeating their county seat rivals, 6 to 0.

The affair developed into something of a duel between Captain Paul English of the Ceramic City combine and Willie Cornelli, the flash little leader of the Lisbon contingent.

As expected, Lisbon proved a tough nut to crack. They had speed, a fair defense and a strong determination to win. It was a fight from the monent the East Liverpool eleven scored its first and only touchdown until the final whistle.

The home eleven chose to take the offensive at the outset of the engagement.

Liverpool kicked to Lisbon after some scrimmage around the center of the fiedd Liverpool took the ball. English then crashed the center of the line for a twenty-yard gain. On the next down he hit the same place fro another thirty yards and a touchdown. Paul English can be credited with the first touchdown scored against Lisbon by an outside team this year. Try for the point failed.

Lisbon chose to kick. English returned the punt to Cornelli who was stopped. Lisbon attempted to punt but both sides were offside. They tried it again and Lisbon kicked out of bounds. The first quarter ended with East Liverpool six points ahead.

Liverpool gained on a pass, English to Perry. Lisbon took the ball on a punt and Hum kicked to English who made a nice return of it. He was injured in the play and time out was called. Lisbon took the ball on punt and Hum again kicked to English. English kicked to Cornelli who made a twenty-yard return. Hum kicked to English who fumbled but a Liverpool player recovered. Liverpool kicked to Cornelli, and Hum returned it.

This quarter had plenty of kick in it. English's next try was blocked and Lisbon recovered. Hum punted to McVeigh. English made a 20 yard gain around right end. English punted and the half ended.

The third and fourth periods were devoid of features save Cornelli's 50-yard run which brought up behind the East Liverpool goal posts, but, however, went for naught because Cornelli had neglected to stay on the playing field.

Within the last few minutes the East Liverpool backs began to beat down the Lisbon defensive and were within a few feet of the goal when the clash ended.

Lisbon was handicapped by the muddy condition of the field, preventing the use of their fast end runs and forward passes. Boone's aggregation lacked the services of three or four regulars.

VALLEYS HERE NEXT SATURDAY

Clash With Laughlin in West Penn Cup Tie Game.

Facing their hardest opposition of the year, the Homer Laughlin soccer club will clash with the strong Mahoning Valleys, of Youngstown, next Saturday afternoon at Newell.

The contest is one of the series in the first round of the West Penn Cup Tie competition.

The Valleys are considered one of the fastest aggregations in the state, but, according to Manager Jesse Shaw, of the locals, will find something of a job on their respective and collective hands when they tackle the leaders of the Press Northwest loop here.

The Laughlins have yet to taste defeat. Their fighting qualities have been proven in four games this season when, on each occasion they came from behind to win.

REFUSES TO CONCEDE LOSS OF BIG TEN RACE

Stagg Asserts Chicago Has Fighting Chance, Recalling Fact That Maroon Won Title Year Ago After Playing Three Tie Games; Says Penn Won Saturday Because it Played Better Football.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—They die hard in the Stagg family, if at all.

Defeated by Pennsylvania on Saturday, while Michigan and Iowa were going to the pace in the Conference free-for-all by winning from Illinois and Ohio State, respectively, Alonzo Stagg, the extremely young old man of Chicago football, decided to concede that his team would not win the Big Ten title again.

In his pensive, deliberate way, he summoned the following arguments by way of rebuttal:

Chicago won the championship last year after all seemed lost. It won in spite of three tie games and this year, to date, it has only one. That anything can happen to Michigan and Iowa, although the latter's prospects are almost excessively plausible with only Wisconsin and Minnesota to beat.

"But we have a fighting chance and that's all any man can ask," he added.

"We played good football; Pennsylvania played better,' was his second comment.

He didn't say, however, that Chicago played good football only after the eastern outfit had scored what proved to be the winning touchdown. The Maroon seems to be notorious as a slow starter, this being its cardinal weakness, unless one wishes to stress the team's lack of versatility on attack.

It doesn't seem capable of varying its plays, although Stagg has given it plenty of good ones. On Saturday, he uncovered several passing plays that looked good until the passer let the ball go. In most cases, it was passed beyond the receiver or the latter failed to get in the clear.

There appears to be no good reason for this ineptitude on the part of the Chicago team. It is big, it is fast and it does not lack for veteran material. Yet it really clicks only when running plays are under way and the day has gone when a team can hope to strong-arm its path to touchdowns.

As the situation stands, Chicago has only two scoring methods. One is to use "five yards" McCarty on off tackle and line plays. The other is to get Bob Curley into position for a field goal. This young man doesn't need much maneuvering, any spot inside the fifty yard line being suitable to his exceedingly well behaved ankle.

As a matter of fact, Curley has kicked Chicago into one Conference title and right on the heels of another during the last two seasons.

Give the young man a little more weight and it would be something of a different operation to keep him out of an all American selection. As it is, he is the welterweight personification of what Chicago needs most—an open field runner.

It fairly oozes power on the attack, with McCarty, Ernwein, Timme and Curley in operation. It has very little deception.

The power is amplified as one comes to the forward line, averaging close to 200 pounds.

Just a very good football team that cannot seem to realize its best potentialities, in spite of what one of the greatest football coaches of all times can do.

Meet the Wild Riding Cowboy of the Gridiron Face to Face

Panthers Do Things Up Right; Dedicate Field and Beat Plaid

By KATHARINE BRUSH.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 26.—Whether it is that the gods weep when they see a lady reporter attempting to cover gentlemens' sports, I know not, but anyway, it always rains. It rained Saturday. It rained on the new Pitt stadium. It rained on the 45,000 spectators huddled in the new Pitt stadium. It rained on the broad blue-and-orange backs of the Pitt Panthers, and on the not less broad scarlet backs of the warriors of Carnegie Tech. The only people at the game on whom it didn't rain were the sporting writers, sitting pretty under glass in the press box. Much to my indignation they don't allow women in the press box at football games, and so I sat in the open and it rained on me. In the middle of the first quarter it stopped raining, of course, but that was locking the stable after the horse was stolen. Everybody by that time was much too wet to care.

But there's no use talking—aside from rain, Pittsburgh does know how to do things properly. When they dedicated a new stadium, they see to it that the team that belongs to the stadium wins the game. I saw the Yale Bowl dedicated with a Yale licking that I'd rather not talk about, and I saw Michigan run up a score so high that they were calling for adding machines in the press box the day the Ohio State stadium was dedicated. But Pittsburgh has a great sense of the fitness of things. The beautiful new monument to the athlethic valor of the University of Pittsburgh was dedicated with a 12 0 victory.

It all began with a cross country race between Pitt and Carnegie Tech over the Schenley Park course. This took place at 11 a. m., and the trackesters won—at least, so somebody told me when I got down to breakfast. The gates of the stadium opened at 11:15, and a game between the Freshmen of the two colleges was played at 11:30. It was raining hard then, and I understand there was nobody much in the stadium but 22 mothers and 22 fathers. At 1:30 there was a parade consisting of several hundred pairs of overshoes each containing the pedal extremities of a Pitt professor or a stadium instigator or an ex-football star of Pitt. Thus the paths of gridiron glory lead but through the mud-puddles. And at 2:30 the game began.

Did you ever see seventeen miles of seats? The new Pitt stadium has that many. They weren't entirely filled at the game this afternoon. Continuing to speak in statistics, I should say that approximately 12 of the 17 miles had people in them. And not only people,but other things. Raincoats. Umbrellas. Soggy newspapers. Pieces of oil-cloth and pocket flasks. It was, all in all, quite a spectacle. The steep slops of the stadium bloomed like a florists window, with yellow slickers, and blue and red and purple feminine raincoats, and wee pink faces. And the playing field was not less remarkable to look at. The players who had issued forth immaculate became, after the first couple of downs, almost indistinguishable hunks of mud. Their faces looked like the faces of women having clay packs in a beauty shop. Their once-white legs were African in hue. The letters on the backs of their jerseys were practically obliterated, so that you couldn't tell one from the other.

Every few minutes time had to be called and towels rushed to the scene of action, so that they could wipe the mud out of their eyes. Every down sent several of them sliding on their hips in several directions. The ball was a cake of soap—in slipperiness, not in cleanliness.

But it took more than this to daunt the spirits and dull the enthusiasms of the rooters on both sides of the vast concrete cup. The cheering was loud and long, and especially effective since the walls of the stadium gave it back in a vast tumultuous echo. The bands of both institutions, Tech's in their Scottish kilts and Pitt's in dignified blue and gold uniforms were there in full force. The usual song-battle between the two cheering sections took place between the halves, and rockets were sent off at the same time by a band of collegians dressed in black hoods, so that they resembled members of the Ku Klux dipped in ink. There is a cemetery on a hill back of the Pitt stadium, and just as the largest and noisiest rocket went off a funeral procession passed on its way there. From where I sat, in the front row, the cars in the procession seemed to be rolling along on the top rim of the stadium. A wierd effect. It quite ruined my afternoon.

There was great consternation among Carnegie fans all around me because Bastian and Sebastian of the Tech team would both be out of the lineup. I know so little about the local gridiron talent that I thought they meant a man named Bastian and C. Bastian, his brother, and even gave a melancholy sigh for Mrs. Bastian, with both her boys laid up. (The above will illustrate plainly why they don't let women sit in the press box, nor put their stories on the sporting pages.)

The fact remains that neither youth was in the game until the very last, when Sebastian went in. For the most part, yes we had no Bastians. Se or otherwise.

The last half was enlivened by Gustafson's touchdown, and by a red faced worthy two seats away from me who arose in the midst of an exciting moment and sang a solo lauding the glories of West Virginia, very solemnly and, I think you'll agree somewhat inappropriately. When it was explained to him in no uncertain terms that he was in error he apologized to the crowd and subsided. Except for these two happy moments the last half was a monotony of runners who ran wide but not far, and kicks that went high but not long, and mud, and chills.

Summing up, I should say it was a good day for the Panthers and a perfectly elegant day for ducks.

ENGLISH PUNCHES LINE FOR SOLE TOUCHDOWN IN FIRST PERIOD OF GAME

Leader of Ceramic City Eleven, Starting in Midfield, Penetrates Lisbon Line for 50 yards in Two Plays; Final East Liverpool Offensive Puts Ball Within Feet of Enemy Goal as Whistle Ends Battle.

Pitted against a light put practically veteran Lisbon high school squad, battling in its own back yard, Coach O. V. Boone's Blue and White gridders Saturday began their Columbiana county championship campaign by defeating their county seat rivals, 6 to 0.

As expected. Lisbon proved a tough nut to crack. They had speed, a fair defense and a strong determination to win. It was a fight from the monent the East Liverpool eleven scored its first and only touchdown until the final whistle.

The home eleven chose to take the offensive at the outset of the engagement.

On the next down he hit the same place fro another thirty yards and a touchdown. Paul English can be credited with the first touchdown scored against Lisbon by an outside team this year. Try for the point failed.

Lisbon chose to kick. English returned the punt to Cornelli who was stopped. Lisbon attempted to punt but both sides were offside. They tried it again and Lisbon kicked out of bounds. The first quarter ended with East Liverpool six points ahead.

Liverpool gained on a pass, English to Perry. Lisbon took the ball on a punt and Hum kicked to English who made a nice return of it. He was injured in the play and time out was called. Lisbon took the ball on punt and Hum again kicked to English. English kicked to Cornelli who made a twenty-yard return. Hum kicked to English who fumbled but a Liverpool player recovered. Liverpool kicked to Cornelli, and Hum returned it.

This quarter had plenty of kick in it. English's next try was blocked and Lisbon recovered. Hum punted to McVeigh. English made a 20 yard gain around right end. English punted and the half ended.

The third and fourth periods were devoid of features save Cornelli's 50-yard run which brought up behind the East Liverpool goal posts, but, however, went for naught because Cornelli had neglected to stay on the playing field.

Within the last few minutes the East Liverpool backs began to beat down the Lisbon defensive and were within a few feet of the goal when the clash ended.

Lisbon was handicapped by the muddy condition of the field, preventing the use of their fast end runs and forward passes. Boone's aggregation lacked the services of three or four regulars.

The Valleys are considered one of the fastest aggregations in the state, but, according to Manager Jesse Shaw, of the locals, will find something of a job on their respective and collective hands when they tackle the leaders of the Press Northwest loop here.

The Laughlins have yet to taste defeat. Their fighting qualities have been proven in four games this season when, on each occasion they came from behind to win.

MICHIGAN IS SETTING PACE

By George Barry.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Although Pennsylvania has gone to the front in national esteem as a result of successive victories over Yale and Chicago, three other teams today could claim better records than the Red and Blue, at least as far as actual figures were concerned. They were Michigan, Syracuse and Cornell, none of which have had a point scored against them.

Michigan, playing a harder early season schedule than the other two, probably deserves as high a ranking as any, the Wolverines having met Michigan Aggies, Indiana, Wisconsin and Illinois without having their goal line or goal posts crossed. Meanwhile, Michigan has run up a total of 128 points to 158 for Syracuse and 195 for Cornell.

The latter, however, has been playing a series of warm-up games and will not get a real test until it meets Dartmouth, one of many undefeated teams.

Some of the others are Pennsylvania, a national pace-go-getter; Alabama, Washington, which boasts the high total of 208 points; Iowa, the Army and W. and J.

Colgate, the Navy and Missouri also remain undefeated. But have played tie games. So, for that matter, has Washington, the Coast leader.

Among the more or less small timers of eastern football, Boston college and New York university stand out. They haven't been beaten yet, although the class of their opposition could have been improved.

Saturday's scores ran pretty generally to form but were not without their surprises, particularly in the south. There, Georgia Tech, rated as having its best team of recent years, was beaten by Alabama, which jumped into prominence as a result. Georgia's rather top heavy defeat of Vanderbilt also came as a shock to national followers of football.

Dartmouth's defeat of Harvard was not unexpected but the size of the score, 32 to 9, lacked general anticipation. It indicated that Dartmouth has a very good team or Harvard a very poor one. Yale came back against Brown, as did California and Stanford in the Coast Conference and Nebraska in the Missouri valley group. Yet none of the three latter were able to take the league leadership, Washington holding the pace on the coast and Missouri and Ames in the Valley Conference.

The middle west's scores were notable for three things. Iowa and Michigan kept their slates clean at the expense of Ohio State and Illinois, while Notre Dame, annihilated by the Army, came back against Minnesota.

Several intersectional games were played but outside of the Penn-Chicago contest, they were of little consequence, merely serving to increase the east's lead. Not only did Pennsylvania win but the Army disposed of St. Louis, Penn State defeated Michigan Aggies and Fordham scored over Akron. The west then finished a poor afternoon of it when Northwestern lost to Tulane.

Rayon, or artificial silk, manufacture has grown to such proportions that formation of a rayon trade association is being discussed in Great Britain.

MICHIGAN IS SETTING PACE

By George Barry.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Although Pennsylvania has gone to the front in national esteem as a result of successive victories over Yale and Chicago, three other teams today could claim better records than the Red and Blue, at least as far as actual figures were concerned. They were Michigan, Syracuse and Cornell, none of which have had a point scored against them.

Michigan, playing a harder early season schedule than the other two, probably deserves as high a ranking as any, the Wolverines having met Michigan Aggies, Indiana, Wisconsin and Illinois without having their goal line or goal posts crossed. Meanwhile, Michigan has run up a total of 128 points to 158 for Syracuse and 195 for Cornell.

The latter, however, has been playing a series of warm-up games and will not get a real test until it meets Dartmouth, one of many undefeated teams.

Some of the others are Pennsylvania, a national pace-go-getter; Alabama, Washington, which boasts the high total of 208 points; Iowa, the Army and W. and J.

Colgate, the Navy and Missouri also remain undefeated. But have played tie games. So, for that matter, has Washington, the Coast leader.

Among the more or less small timers of eastern football, Boston college and New York university stand out. They haven't been beaten yet, although the class of their opposition could have been improved.

Saturday's scores ran pretty generally to form but were not without their surprises, particularly in the south. There, Georgia Tech, rated as having its best team of recent years, was beaten by Alabama, which jumped into prominence as a result. Georgia's rather top heavy defeat of Vanderbilt also came as a shock to national followers of football.

Dartmouth's defeat of Harvard was not unexpected but the size of the score, 32 to 9, lacked general anticipation. It indicated that Dartmouth has a very good team or Harvard a very poor one. Yale came back against Brown, as did California and Stanford in the Coast Conference and Nebraska in the Missouri valley group. Yet none of the three latter were able to take the league leadership, Washington holding the pace on the coast and Missouri and Ames in the Valley Conference.

The middle west's scores were notable for three things. Iowa and Michigan kept their slates clean at the expense of Ohio State and Illinois, while Notre Dame, annihilated by the Army, came back against Minnesota.

Several intersectional games were played but outside of the Penn-Chicago contest, they were of little consequence, merely serving to increase the east's lead. Not only did Pennsylvania win but the Army disposed of St. Louis, Penn State defeated Michigan Aggies and Fordham scored over Akron. The west then finished a poor afternoon of it when Northwestern lost to Tulane.

Rayon, or artificial silk, manufacture has grown to such proportions that formation of a rayon trade association is being discussed in Great Britain.
